Politics Charged As FERA Seizes Georgia's Relief

Long Will Answer Ickes Here Monday

By Felix Bruner.

In the face of a Republican charge that relief money is being used for the purpose of playing politics, Harry L. Hopkins, Emergency Relief Administrator, moved yesterday against the State of Georgia by taking over control of all relief expenditures there.

This action followed announcement by Secretary Ickes Thursday that no more PWA money will be turned over to the Georgia State government. Both moves followed outspoken criticism of the Roosevelt Administration by Gov. Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia.

Ickes is expected to carry out his threat of withdrawing works money from Louisiana, following passage yesterday by the State Legislature of a bill requiring that the State supervise expenditures of all Federal funds within its borders.

Monday Debate Limited.

The political charge was hurled in the Senate by Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, who declared the Administration of relief funds had an unpleasant odor. This was the second reference to odors in the present fight, following as it did Secretary Ickes' statement that Senator Huey P. Long was suffering from "halitosis of the intellect."

Long sent word to the Senate that he expected to reply to Ickes in a speech from the Senate floor Monday. The announcement was followed by an agreement, engineered by Floor Leader Joseph T. Robinson, to limit debate Monday.

The announcement from Hopkins' office was brief. It said the Federal Government had taken over relief in Georgia. It added:

"Mr. Hopkins announced that all Federal funds for direct relief will be discontinued not later than June 1, and that after this discontinuance direct relief will become the responsibility of the State and local governments."

Fourth State Affected.

It added that Hopkins had designated Miss Gay B. Shepperson as director of Federal relief in Georgia.

Hopkins refused to amplify the statement concerning discontinuance of relief funds. He refused to explain whether there would be no more relief in Georgia or whether activities would be confined to work relief. This latter policy might prove difficult in view of Ickes' announced intention of withholding works money.

Georgia is the fourth State in which the Government has taken relief operations out of the hands of the State government. The others are North Dakota, where the change followed charges of alleged irregularities last fall; Ohio, where the charge has been made that the State Democratic committee was using relief for political purposes, and Louisiana.

No official explanation of the change in Georgia was forthcoming. Hopkins has insisted that the State contribute to relief funds. It never has done so, although local

The Solution

To the Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the fifth thrilling "What Would You Do?" real life drama broadcast last night at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

"Silence! Silence!" the courtroom bailiff repeated.

The room quieted. The voice of the judge was stern as he said:

"According to the verdict of the jury rendered in this court on October 27, 1934, I do now hereby sentence Sterling Anthony Van Houten to 20 years in Leavenworth Prison for using the United States mails to defraud."

Three years have passed. * * * No, District Attorney Harry Langford did not accept the Federal judgeship which was offered him. Instead, he is now acting as voluntary judge in a recently formed court of domestic relations. Here he is devoting his life to helping young couples clear away the marital difficulties which, unsolved, might bring them to divorce and years of suffering. His daughter, Mary, is his constant companion. She is secretary of the East Side Community House. At night she studies law. She hopes to follow in her father's footsteps.

Do not miss the next in this gripping series, entitled "What Price Happiness?" at 5:30 p. m. Monday from WJEJ.

Philosophers Elect Uncle of Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 19.—Three Nobel Prize winners, two college presidents and a relative of President Roosevelt were among 26 men elected to membership in the American Philosophical Society today.

The new members include Dr. Karl Landsteiner, of New York; Dr. George R. Minot, of Harvard, and Dr. Harold C. Urey, Columbia University, all Nobel Prize winners; Frederick A. Delano, of Washington, an uncle of President Roosevelt; Dr. James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard, and Dr. Harold Willis Dodds, president of Princeton.

Roland Morris, Philadelphia lawyer and former Ambassador to Japan, was elected president for his third term.

Cabinet Group Told to Probe Textile 'Crisis'

President's Action on Tax and Imports Is Second Victory for Mills.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday announced the appointment of a Cabinet committee of four to study the precarious state of the cotton textile industry, including such questions as the effect of the cotton processing tax and cotton cloth imports from Japan.

This represented the second victory for the congressional textile bloc, which has been clamoring for a removal of the processing tax and the exclusion of Japanese imports, as the two basic reasons for steadily diminishing activity in the textile industry.

Likewise, it represented an abrupt "turn about" in attitude of the Administration, since Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and other officials of the AAA have been vigorous in defense of the processing tax as the one means of financing the New Deal farm program.

The textile situation was debated in yesterday's Cabinet meeting, following which Mr. Roosevelt designated the Secretaries of State, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor to investigate the whole subject, including problems of the present "emergency" and plans for the future.

Four Points Scanned.

The immediate questions the Cabinet group will survey, Mr. Roosevelt said, are four.

1. The relationship of the processing tax to the present emergency and consideration of some other way the tax can be levied with greater effectiveness and less disturbance to the industry.

2. The wage differential between the North and the South, and what bearing it may have on the closing of New England mills.

3. The extent cotton cloth imports are exercised an injurious effect on the industry, and whether restrictions should be imposed.

4. The effect the prevailing price of cotton is having on consumption. (The President quoted members of the textile bloc as saying that many mills are piling up inventories because retailers have been awaiting lower costs before making heavy purchases.

Long-range factors the committee will consider were outlined by Mr. Roosevelt as:

1. Analysis of the efficiency of American plants to establish the

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

This striking photograph was made just as noose was being adjusted about the neck of William De Boe, hanged yesterday at Smithland, Ky., for attack on a woman. DeBoe, the first white man to be hanged by Kentucky in a generation, shouted his innocence in a 59-minute speech before 1,500 persons saw the trap pulled.

Building Gains In March Point Way to Revival

Permits Reported 42.9 Pct. Greater Than in Same Month Last Year.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Indications that the much-desired revival in the construction industry, especially in residential building, is on its way were seen yesterday in the Labor Department's report on building permits issued during March.

If the acceleration in building, as revealed by the March statistics, continues at the same pace throughout the spring and summer, it will constitute a strong impetus to economic recovery, with widespread effects on the nondurable goods industry, still in the doldrums, construction authorities contended.

Dr. Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, reported that the number of building permits issued last month was 42.9 per cent greater than in March, 1934, and that the established cost of the buildings for which the permits were issued was 74.5 per cent greater.

Boom in Residences.

The most pronounced increase recorded last month over March, 1934, was in residential building, his tabulation revealed. The number of permits issued in March for new residential building was 175.3 per cent greater than in the same month last year, while the estimated value of the structures for which these permits were issued was 130.9 per cent greater.

The residential building increases were general throughout the country, ranging from 20 per cent in New England to more than 300 per cent in the South Atlantic States. Atlanta, Ga., appeared to be enjoying a building boom, ranking third in the list of cities tabulated according to valuation of all building construction for which permits were issued. In Atlanta permits were issued for 817 buildings, with a value of $2,304,170.

Washington was fifth on the list of building permits issued last month, although in population it is

Youth, 22, Preaches on Gibbet An Hour to 1,500 and Then Dies

Calls Woman Accuser From Crowd; Pleads That Sin Doesn't Pay; Smokes Cigarette; Meets Noose Fearlessly.

By the United Press.

Smithland, Ky., April 19.—Fifteen hundred people stood in a natural amphitheater today and heard one of the most amazing sermons ever preached—a sermon from the scaffold.

The "preacher" was William Thomas Deboe who, for 59 minutes, harangued the crowd on justice and morals and then was hanged for rape of the wife of a Kentucky merchant—a crime he denied.

While spectators from Tennessee, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky crowded the slopes of a hill looking down into the 100-foot inclosure for the scaffold, DeBoe poured forth the last reactions of a doomed man.

The crowd was silent when he demanded to know whether his accuser was in the crowd. She was, but she remained silent until DeBoe's insistence impelled her to cry out:

"Here I am!"

Faced by Accuser.

His first words as he mounted the scaffold in back of the one-story brick Livingston County jail at 5:22 a. m., were:

"Is Mrs. Marjorie Johnson in the crowd?"

Silence answered him. Again he asked, and again silence. Nine times he asked for his accuser. Then she stepped forward.

DeBoe, calm, speaking with a Southern accent, demanded:

"Woman, are you satisfied?"

His accuser, flustered and excited, defended herself when Deboe asserted:

"If I had $300 or $500 to give her, she would not have made the charge."

His accuser flushed and shouted: "Not for a thousand dollars! Not for a thousand dollars!"

Visibly shaken, the woman yet stood steady and straight as DeBoe cried:

"You would; yes, you would, too."

"No, I wouldn't either!" she hurled back.

Eyes of the assemblage watched her as she defended herself, quite as much as they did DeBoe.

From the tirade against his accuser, DeBoe turned to explain the cost of crime to "you boys and girls here."

"You can see what happens when you do things that are wrong. I robbed, yes, but I am no rapist. I robbed and I am being killed. Don't ever do wrong, because you have to pay."

Paraphrases Sermon on Mount.

DeBoe, referring to Good Friday, reviewed briefly the spirit of the day. "They are even putting me down on the day Christ died. Well, they are doing the same thing to me that they did to Him."

Although using his own words, he, in effect, recited the words of Christ, who said: "Forgive them, Father, for they know not what they do."

Instead, DeBoe, with a slight display of emotion, said.

"I've made peace with God. I've asked Him to forgive that woman, to forgive all."

Throughout the sermon the crowd stood spellbound.

After spending a night parading the streets and jamming the town's four beer gardens, the crowd encountered the unexpected—and respected the occasion.

Ironically, among those standing on the scaffold with the doomed man was a chief deputy sheriff named Gabriel—of Livingstone County.

He and Sheriff George H. Heater stood with the chaplain of the State prison, Walter Bailey, Jailer

D. A. R. Leaves Election Strife To Honor Dead

Mrs. Becker to Take Office This Morning; Congress Closes Today.

From the political cocoon which had bound it before elections were complete, the forty-fourth continental congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution emerged in all its glory yesterday to pay tribute to its dead and the Nation's heroes.

Pre-voting bitterness and its incidents were forgotten as the members gathered in Constitution Hall in a memorial service and later journeyed to Arlington and Mount Vernon to honor the Unknown Soldier and George Washington.

While the 1,436 supporters of Mrs. William A. Becker, of New Jersey, who was swept into the presidency general, carrying her entire ticket with her, were jubilant, the 819 delegates who voted for Mrs. Flora Myers Gillentine, of Tennessee, accepted the verdict with the good grace of their leader.

At Arlington Mrs. Russell William Magna, retiring president general, placed a wreath upon the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Following this ceremony, a D. A. R. marker was unveiled on the grave of Lieut. Hugh Auld, a Revolutionary officer from Maryland.

Visit Mount Vernon.

Then the president general and the daughters journeyed to Mount Vernon, where wreaths were placed in the memory of George and Martha Washington.

At the meeting last night the congress heard two speakers, Will Durant, writer and philosopher, whose subject was "The Crisis in American Civilization," and Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, who spoke on "The Newspaper and the Youthful Citizen."

Today the congress will close with a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel. During the morning the ceremonial inducting Mrs. Becker and her slate into office will be held, while at 2 p. m. the members of the congress will be received at the White House by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The memorial service at the morning meeting yesterday was led by Mrs. Magna. In it all members and officers who died in the last year were honored. Those who took part in the impressive service included the following:

Mrs. Raymond G. Kimbell, chaplain general; Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, Mrs. Frank Hamilton Marshall, Mrs. Eugenia Washington M. Bradfield, Miss Zoe M. Beal, Mrs. Val Taylor, Mrs. William Herron Alexander, Mrs.

AAA Revision May Be Balked By Byrd Fight

Senate Group's Favorable Report Held Up; Hope of Passage Dims.

By Robert C. Albright.

The hotly controversial AAA amendments, Administration vehicle for further farm license powers, last night appeared headed for another run of bad luck that may effectively block passage this session.

Two developments dimmed AAA hopes, just when the track seemed greased for Senate passage.

Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, after weeks of indecision, entered the opposition fight. He will go on a national radio network Monday night to denounce their provisions.

Chairman Ellison D. Smith, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, snugly tucked away in his pocket a favorable report by his committee. The report was ordered nearly two weeks ago, but has never been filed in the Senate.

Embarrasses Robinson.

This was embarrassing for Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson. He had planned to call up the amendments for Senate action as soon as the chamber disposed of the Bankhead tenant-aid bill.

Although Byrd and Smith led last session's fight on the AAA amendments, both had carefully refrained from all criticism this session.

The Virginian had been led to believe substantial changes written into the legislation by AAA experts had answered his objections. He undertook a study of the bill.

Yesterday he charged that virtually all of his original complaints with the measure still are present. Even as favorably reported by the Senate Agricultural Committee, every farmer who packs his goods for shipment would be subject to AAA license and "dictation" by the Secretary of Agriculture, he insisted.

He plans to oppose the amendments vigorously on the Senate floor. He will outline his objec-

Defense Calls Police to Aid Mrs. Lyddane in Court Today

The stage is set in Rockville today for a preliminary hearing for Mrs. Anne Lyddane, who is charged with conspiracy to murder her husband and Mrs. Josephine Beall.

An added attraction to the bizarre case was listed yesterday when Stedman Prescott, chief of counsel for Mrs. Lyddane, summoned J. William Garrett, chief of the county police department, and the 30 members of the force as defense witnesses.

Mr. Stedman said he "may" call James H. Pugh, State's attorney and prosecuting officer, as a defense witness.

The hearing will be conducted by Police Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt in the circuit court at 10 o'clock. A crowd is expected. John H. (Googy) Carnell, John M. Boland and Edwin J. Davis will be arraigned with Mrs. Lyddane.

Mr. Prescott's move was a distinct shock to county authorities in charge of the case and followed Pugh's declaration he has "five surprise witnesses—not police characters" through whom he hopes to prove his allegations.

"The State's attorney has taken the attitude of wanting to keep secret evidence in the case and refusing to allow the defendant (Mrs. Lyddane) to know something about the nature of the crime with which she is charged," Prescott said.

For some days Prescott has been seeking copies of the alleged confessions made by Carnell, Boland and Davis, who now are held in the county jail.

Francis Lyddane is a bookkeeper employed by the Montgomery County liquor board. His wife and Boland are charged with conspiring to murder him. Mrs. Beall, wife of Arthur K. Beall, Darnestown garage proprietor, named Mrs. Lyddane corespondent in a divorce suit she instituted two years ago, but the suit was dropped and the couple reconciled.

Irish Found America, Arctic Explorer Says

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 19.—Dr. Vilhjalmur Stefannson, Arctic explorer, said today the Irish discovered America six or seven centuries before the voyage of Christopher Columbus in 1492.

The explorer told the Pennsylvania Historical Association the Pope has documents to support this claim.

"We'll probably never know the name of the man who discovered America," he added, "but we may be positive he was an Irishman."

Stefansson described a paper written by an Irish monk in 820 A. D. telling of colonization of Iceland by the Irish at that time and said Vatican records show the Pope in 1126 made Greenland a separate bishopric which had an unbroken line of bishops until 1528.

Hitler Answers League Attack On Him Today

Reply Is Planned During Nation's Celebration of His 46th Birthday.

By the United Press.

Berlin, April 19.—Secrecy tonight surrounded Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's reply to the League of Nations Council's resolution condemning Germany for violation of the military clauses in the Treaty of Versailles ending the World War.

Hitler returned from Munich with the reply in his pocket, but divulged its contents to no one. It will be presented tomorrow, in connection with Nation-wide celebration of his forty-sixth birthday anniversary.

Even Der Fuehrer's closest friends professed complete ignorance of how he intended to respond to the League of Nations Council for its unanimous denunciation.

Hitler's reply tonight overshadowed even participation tomorrow of the new army for the first time in any national celebrations since the World War. The nation sought to forecast how its leader would go about maintaining the Reich's dignity and yet rebuke Geneva. Suggestions included:

1. That he would bluntly charge the former allied powers themselves were guilty of breaking the Versailles treaty by not living up to their promise therein to disarm.

2. That Hitler might be more conciliatory in tone, soft-pedaling any hot-worded message in preference for one merely showing the world that Germany feels herself in the right.

The announcement, if it follows the first plan, undoubtedly would go far toward crystalizing the attitude of the people toward the council's resolution. It struck a note of resentment and anger even among the coolest government members, a note which has resounded remarkably down through the masses.

Fight on Rats Slated At Airline's Isle Depots

Seattle, April 19 (AP).—Men at the island "depots" on the projected commercial air route of Pan-American Airways to China will live in stilt-supported houses which make use of poison glue to kill rats, termites and wood borers.

The last man in at night will kick away a portable stair. The first man out in the morning will pull it back with a rope. Rats on Wake Island have been reported so numerous that they are destroying each other.

Dust Belt Pastor's Faith Firm, Despite Laryngitis and No Rain

By the Associated Press.

Guymon, Okla., April 19.—The Rev. R. L. Wells, who prayed so hard for rain he came down with laryngitis, encouraged his praying followers from his sick bed today—whispering as dust clouds lingered on:

"We will get rain . . . the Lord will answer soon."

Seven days ago, the Rev. Wells, pastor of the Methodist Church, launched his little congregation on a week of prayer for the rain so sorely needed in the Oklahoma Panhandle. It is one of the hardest-hit of the regions of Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Colorado and Kansas blighted by dust and drought.

Three spearate prayer meetings were held this afternoon in the homes of members to conclude the period of daily supplications—and still no signs of rain. Dust hung over most of the Panhandle.

The fact that rain has fallen north, south and east of the arid Panhandle since the prayer meetings started failed to shake the faith of the bed-ridden minister.

Hoarsely and in pain, he insisted: "We'll be next. Ten days can make a marvelous change in this country."

Three times daily, until stricken today, the Rev. Wells lifted his voice in the public prayer meetings—seeking the moisture that even now would enable Panhandle farmers to raise row crops to provide food to carry them through the coming winter.

The Panhandle remained arid although rainfall totaling 3 inches in some sections fell in central, eastern and southwestern Oklahoma.

No plans have been made for a continuation of the prayer meetings. Easter services at the church of the Rev. Wells probably will be confined to a musical program.

G. O. P. Is Given Worst Defeat as Bill Goes to Senate Intact.

Byrns Is Jubilant As Prestige Soars

Last Rally of Treadway to Recommit Plan Battered Down.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

House Democrats administered the worst defeat of the session to confused Republicans yesterday as they passed the New Deal social security bill, 372 to 33.

The measure, carrying old-age pensions, unemployment insurance and other welfare benefits, was swept through the legislative mill absolutely intact. All radical amendments were smothered. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Speaker Byrns and other House leaders were overjoyed because they did not have to resort to a gag rule. The victory added to their prestige and confounded critics who have detected a leftist tendency in the House.

On the final roll call 288 Democrats, 77 Republicans, 6 Progressives and 1 Farmer-Laborite voted for the bill, while 18 Republicans, 13 Democrats and 2 Farmer-Laborites shouted "No!"

Dared Not Oppose Bill.

It was an open secret on the Hill that many Republicans were not in sympathy with the measure as drafted, but dared not be recorded against it for fear they would be snowed under at the next election.

Led by irrepressible Representative Treadway, Massachusetts, the G. O. P. members made their last stand on a motion to recommit. That maneuver, had it succeeded, would have raised the Federal old-age pension contribution from $15 to $30 a month and, would have eliminated supplemental annuities contemplating 6 per cent pay-roll taxes.

The motion was battered down, 238 to 146. Voting to recommit were 94 Republicans, 43 Democrats, 6 Progressives and 3 Farmer-Laborites, while 256 Democrats and 2 Republicans voted in the negative.

So smoothly did the machine work that none of the advocates of the so-called "cockeyed" amendments were able to gain recognition to seek roll calls on theTownsend $50-$200-a-month old-age pension amendment and the Lundeen $10-a-week unemployment insurance scheme. Both of these proposals are dead for this session.

As passed the measure provides:

1. Pensions for needy persons over 65, with Uncle Sam matching the States on a 50-50 basis up to $15 a month.

2. Supplemental compulsory old-age annuities to be financed through a graduated 2 to 6 per cent tax imposed on employers and workers alike.

3. A system of unemployment insurance starting in 1936 to be paid out of excise taxes on employers; includes cooperation between the Federal and State governments.

4. Federal aid to States which assist dependent and crippled children, mothers and persons injured in industry.

All told the measure carried new taxes which ultimately will produce about $2,783,200,000 a year.

Mott Charges Machine.

The high point of the day's comparatively mild debate came when aggressive Representative Mott (Republican) Oregon, accused the Democrats of crushing the minority with a "well-oiled machine."

Mock cheers reverberated through the chamber as Democrats, in good humor over the turn of events, showed Mott they enjoyed his chagrin.

"There is a little good in this bill as well as a great deal of bad," he conceded. "I intend to vote for the bill merely on the ground that it is better than nothing."

Uproarous applause was drawn by Chairman Connery, of the Labor committee, as he praised "Fighting Bob" Doughton, Ways and Means committee chairman and floor manager of the legislation, as "a great

Richberg Faces Senatorial Quiz On Colt Dispute

Nye Committee to Ask Explanation of 'Delay' in NRA Crackdown.

By the Associated Press.

Feeling that the presidential restriction against the move had ended, the Senate Munitions Committee announced yesterday it would ask Donald R. Richberg, NRA chief, to explain asserted delay in "cracking down" on the Colt's Firearm Co. for refusal to negotiate with a labor union.

At about the same time, President Roosevelt had word from Secretary Perkins that a new effort by the Labor Department to settle the Colt labor dispute was showing progress.

The decision by the Munitions Committee followed an announcement by Richberg that negotiations guided by NRA peacemakers had ended without success and that he was prepared to ask Government departments to withhold further business from the company.

Richberg to Appear.

It was this announcement that led to the committee decision to question Richberg, President Roosevelt having interceded last week to prevent the Blue Eagle chief from being questioned while NRA negotiations to settle the dispute were under way. Chairman Nye (Republican), North Dakota, of the committee, said today Richberg had expressed willingness to testify now, in view of the collapse of his agency's peace efforts.

Nye predicted, meanwhile, that the bill proposing to strip war of its profits and to put industry under drastic Army control in time of national conflict would be ready for introduction Wednesday or Thursday.

In New York, the committee's investigators searched the files of Morgan & Co. for any evidence that European loans or munitions contracts had anything to do with this country entering the World War on the side of the Allies.

Cautious Course Advised.

Full access to the files has been obtained, Nye said, but the cautious course advised by President Roosevelt will be followed by the committee in making public any of the war-time correspondence of the British government with the big banking company which acted as the Crown's fiscal agent during the war.

The labor relations board recommended yesterday that the NRA compliance division remove the Blue Eagle of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio, for alleged violation of the recovery act's collective bargaining guaranty.

The recommendation is practically meaningless for a time, however, since the District of Columbia Supreme Court has enjoined NRA from removing the company's compliance symbol.

The board found that the company had violated the act by fostering a company union.

LaGuardia Pays Visit To the Painted Desert

Grand Canyon, Ariz., April 19 (AP). En route to his boyhood home at Prescott, Ariz., to visit school-day friends of 37 years ago, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York City visited the Painted Desert and Arizona's great Petrified Forest today.

Mayor LaGuardia will be escorted tomorrow to Prescott by a welcoming party from that city, headed by Mayor Charles F. Robb, one of his former classmates. Mayor LaGuardia will be given a truly Western reception. A State highway patrol and police escort will meet the party at Granite and clear the way into the Eastern mayor's old home town.

The LaGuardias probably will remain in Prescott until Tuesday, when they will return to New York by airplane.

Between You and Me

G. O. P. Prays for an Issue or Two; Which Comes First, the Man or the Platform?

By Raymond Clapper

POLITICAL PARADE: Those things you see all over the landscape are lightning rods of Republican presidential candidates . . . Young Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey urges decentralization of government . . . Ogden Mills sounds his daily warning that NRA is taking away our liberties . . . A famous political hostess gazes into the crystal and says to watch out next year for a tall, dark handsome Senator from Michigan . . . Senator Vandenberg rises in the Senate to object to a hearty appropriation for Southern tenant farmers who won't vote Republican anyway . . . Republican National Chairman Fletcher passes the hat in New York . . . David A. Reed returns from a two months cruise thinking Mr. Hoover "wouldn't dream of running again." . . . Lawrence Richey, Mr. Hoover's Washington lookout, says he is receiving thousands of letters, 99 per cent of which demand that Mr. Hoover run again . . . William Allen White says Mr. Hoover is a man of destiny, but doesn't know whether the thumbs are pointed up or down . . . H. C. Hoover, retired mining engineer, returns to his home in Palo Alto after a business trip East and has nothing to say.

* * * *

Physicians say that a man in the throes of a mild nervous breakdown often suffers a peculiar bewilderment so that he can't decide which shoe to put on first. Usually he will snap out of it in time.

The Republican Party appears to be in some such state. Midwest Republicans can't decide whether to hold that Midwestern rally. National leaders don't know whether to attempt to set the styles for next year in slightly pink tones or stick to the good old reliable black and gold designs of the budget balancing gold standard which were so long in vogue.

Some want to pick the issue first. Other say the man comes first. They are back on the old egg and chicken argument and you know how far that will get.

But there's hope. Chicago Republicans, recently licked in a mayoralty fight when "Pickax" Kelley drew the largest Democratic majority in the city's history, are back on their feet rounding up pledges. They aren't worrying about issues or men. All they ask is that every Republican sign a pledge to vote against Roosevelt and Gov. Horner. That's progress. They have decided at least which collar they won't wear next year.

* * * *

Issues. A dull word. The only thing duller is somebody who is trying to make an issue. Politicians, vain species that they are, think they make issues. Put a dozen of them in a hotel room after midnight and they will agree that with their brains, a press agent and a mimeograph, they can make an issue out of anything.

Real issues, the kind that swept Hoover through the Solid South like Sherman marching to the sea, and four years later drove him back to Palo Alto with only six States in his pocket, or the kind that landed poor Mr. Harding, dazed, in the White House, are beyond human control, often beyond human reckoning at all. Prohibition raced over the country like a tide and a few years later receded. Gold wrenched the Nation in the nineties, and was a dead issue by 1900. The league issue in 1920, fanned as it was by the handful of irreconcilable Senators and a dozen newspaper correspondents, would have been no more powerful than the much more thoroughly organized World Court drive had it not touched the deep-seated insular instinct of a sheltered Nation reared between the thick walls of two oceans. Slavery thrust itself forward finally in spite of the efforts of politicians to duck it and repress it for a quarter of a century.

* * * *

Maybe the Republicans will have an issue next year and maybe they won't. They worked diligently to create one last year and lost even Pennsylvania. The most they can do is to detect the tide and ride with it. Right now the tide hunters are out all over the high seas trying to locate it. If they find it they can ride in with it next year. If not, well, there still will be another election in 1940—at any rate, some people still think so.

Part of the trouble of New England textile interests can be blamed on antiquated plant and production methods. Japanese imports of cotton goods which are causing the current outcry are manufactured, so the Government is advised, with second-hand spindles sold to them by New England factories. Even during the boom period textiles were having troubles. Many mills shut down then. Absentee ownership, lack of aggressive sales methods, haphazard overproduction followed by long shut-downs, that is the story as seen here.

Administration leaders see in this situation a fortunate opportunity to stimulate the capital goods industry. They are preparing to take advantage of the crisis to persuade the industry to modernize, get rid of obsolete machinery and kill two birds with one stone—stimulate the lagging heavy industries and put the textile industry in shape mechanically to meet existing competition.

Word comes up from Georgia where Gov. Talmadge is snapping his red suspenders and calling President Roosevelt an "extreme radical" that Huey Long won't get that delegation after all, as he had expected. Talmadge expects to take it himself.

He says the next President who goes into the White House will be a man who knows what it is to work in the sun 14 hours a day. That eliminates everybody else unless they are going to count time making open air political speeches.

When "The March of Time" newsreel showing Huey Long was flashed on the screen at the Palace Theater, the audience burst into boos and catcalls. The Sands Point washroom episode brought raucous laughter. Ushers moved about the audience trying in vain to shush the outburst.

A distinguished foreign visitor has been in Washington meeting New Dealers at cocktail parties, trying conscientiously to gather some idea of what it is all about. The results have been discouraging.

"My word," the visitor said after a week of it, "when I talk to one of your Brain Trusters at a cocktail party, I can never be sure whether he is serious or just tight."

Senate Votes Copyright Pact, But Learns It Moved Too Fast

Will Be Asked to Retrace Its Steps by Sponsor of Measure.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate ratified a reciprocal copyright treaty yesterday only to find it had moved so fast that it will be asked Monday to retrace its steps.

Senator Duffy (Democrat), Wisconsin, who has supported the treaty and an accompanying bill revising copyright protection for writers, motion picture producers and others, said he would ask the Senate Monday to reconsider. An agreement had been reached, he said, to move both the treaty and the copyright bill through Congress together. He was absent when the treaty was ratified without a record vote.

The treaty, submitted to the President more than a year ago, provides for automatic copyright in all of the 40 or more signatory nations of any writing or other production copyrighted in any one of the nations adhering to the pact.

Secretary Hull, in a message accompanying the treaty, said:

"The United States has become a great producer of literary and artistic works, which include of course, not merely the writings of authors and composers, but the output of vast industries such as the motion picture studios. The demand for these products is world-wide.

"At present protection against piracy is, in many places, non-existent or inadequate. Adherance to the convention for the protection of literary and artistic works, which represents the most complete and modern conception of such protection, is the most important step that can be taken to remedy the present situation."

Objection to the treaty was raised at hearings last year that it permitted foreign works to be imported for sale in this country without being printed locally, as provided in the present law. However, Duffy said the advantages derived from the treaty outweighed the disadvantage to the printing industry.

A hearing on the bill revising for the next week or ten days, present copyright laws is scheduled Duffy said. The bill is in the committee on patents, of which Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, is chairman.

Two Charges of Murder Faced by Victims' Son

Woodward, Okla., April 19 (AP).—Russell Boley, 18-year-old college youth, must face trial in District Court on two charges of murder in the shooting and burning of his parents, County Judge L. A. Foster ruled after a preliminary hearing here today.

The hearing was brief. The defense offered no testimony to refute the State's charge the boy confessed killing his 43-year-old parents with a shotgun on Feb. 5, and then burning their bodies in their farm home after covering them with gasoline, so he could marry a girl to whom they objected. No date was set for the trial.

President to Push Carrier Program

Despite the expressed opinion of Democratic leaders that the chances for sweeping transportation legislation at this session are at best uncertain, President Roosevelt indicated yesterday that he intends to send a message to Congress on the subject in the next few weeks.

Earlier in the year, Mr. Roosevelt transmitted reports to Capitol Hill which called for centering Federal regulation over all forms of transportation—buses, trucks, airlines, waterways and shipping—in the Interstate Commerce Commission, thus placing them on a par with the railroads.

He reiterated yesterday that he believes this should be done, but he did not say whether he looks for action at this session. In reply to questions, the President said it was debatable whether the I. C. C. should be altered by legislation, adding that the size of that body is relatively unimportant.

TVA Bill Faces Defeat, Power Plan in Danger

Copyright by the United Press.

President Roosevelt's entire power program was placed in jeopardy last night as a poll of the House Military Affairs Committee indicated the Administration's bill to strengthen and expand the activities of the TVA faced almost certain defeat.

The situation was regarded by party leaders as so critical that one member of the committee has appealed strongly to the Chief Executive to intervene in a last-minute effort to salvage the important New Deal proposal.

A report on the bill is expected soon. It proposes to authorize TVA to issue $100,000,000 in bonds to buy electric facilities; to conduct a soil erosion program in seven States; to authorize the purchase by the TVA of municipal power plants if the people show by referendum vote that such action is desired.

In addition, the bill gives TVA specific authority to generate, transmit and distribute power. This provision is intended to counteract a recent Federal Court ruling that the TVA could not legally go into the business of distributing power and could sell only the electrical energy resulting from and incidental to its broad development program.

Opposition Powerful.

Introduced by Chairman John J. McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, the bill has met thunderous opposition from public utilities, coal interests and other highly organized groups bitterly opposing the entire New Deal power program initiated through TVA.

Sensing the effect of this powerful opposition upon the committee, one ardent New Dealer took the initiative and wrote the President warning that the measure was lost unless the White House intervened within 48 hours.

Thus far the President has not acted directly, it was stated, but former Representative Charles West (Democrat), of Ohio, contact man between the White House and Congress, was rushed into the picture. He has conferred with various members of the committee and has been in consultation with TVA officials at Knoxville, Tenn.

Expressions of various committee members in hearings on the bill, one member told the United Press last night, indicated the measure will be lost by a 2-to-1 vote unless White House pressure is exerted.

There are 17 Democrats, 7 Republicans and 1 Farmer-Laborite on the committee. Seven Democrats already have indicated clear opposition to the measure in committee, three others are considered doubtful while all Republicans are reported virtually certain to vote against it.

Democrats Balk.

Of the seven Democratic opponents, six come from States in which coal mining is a chief industry. This industry is fighting the bill on the ground that the use of coal ultimately will be supplanted by electrical and water power, generated under the broad development program.

With the activities of the TVA curtailed in some respects by the Federal court ruling, congressional friends of the New Deal said privately last night that defeat of the McSwain bill would arouse vigorous sectional quarrels which would endanger the Grand Coulee Dam and other reclamation projects.

One member who refused to be quoted said:

"It is certain that Southern Congressmen will not hasten to vote funds for Western projects if Congress denies money for the TVA or in any way refuses to permit it to operate as President Roosevelt desires."

In this implied threat lies the danger confronting the entire New Deal program. The success of the McSwain bill in committee will depend upon the ability of Administration authorities to swing the votes of the recalcitrant Democrats.

De Vane Defends Utility Curb Bill.

By the Associated Press.

Protests of two Republican Senators against phases of the bill aimed at curbing public utility holding companies were met yesterday by a wagon load of statistical information poured into the Interstate Commerce Committee hearing by Dozier A. De Vane, solicitor of the Federal Power Commission.

While Senators Hastings (Republican), Delaware, and White (Republican), Maine, pressed question after question at him as he testified before the committee the white-haired Florida attorney defended the bill.

"If we had to make a selection between the two phases of the bill," De Vane said, "I think it would be in the public interest to drop the rates section and pass the other sections. I shall try to prove that as I go along."

"You'll have difficulty proving that," Hastings commented, puffing on a long cigar.

De Vane insisted, however, that the two phases of the bill—one giving the commission power to dissolve undesired holding companies, and the other to supervise wholesale rate structures—should go along together.

Senator White objected to making the measure an "omnibus bill," and insisted it should have been divided so the Senate could consider each phase separately.

Beer Empire's Fall Described In Schultz Trial

Dwindling of 'Phone Calls From Thousands to 10 Outlined.

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., April 19.—The crumbling of Dutch Schultz' Bronx beer empire after a raid on his main headquarters was pictured in detail in his Federal court trial today for income-tax evasions.

To get that picture before the middle-aged jury trying the former beer dictator, the Government's legal representatives used duplicates of records stolen from the office of Assistant United States Attorney George S. Tarbell in New York in 1933 by expert cracksmen.

Some of the things those records showed:

That during 1930 a total of 18,839 extra telephone calls was necessary to handle the flourishing beer business which the Government contends poured $2,000,000 into Schultz' hands.

That in May, 1931, one month before Federal operatives and police descended on the central office of the empire in the Bronx, the number of extra calls dropped to 990.

That in July, 1931, they fell to 115, dipped to 10 in August and thereafter stopped altogether.

That extensions ran from one reputed Schultz headquarters to another, forming a spider-webb that caught up a wealth of orders.

Schultz appeared tired or bored or disinterested. He was close-lipped on the developments of the trial, but revealed during a three-hour Good Friday recess, that he has been following his recently adopted role of "book lover."

His latest browsing he confided, was in a book by Ambrose Bierce, which "tells all about how you newspaper fellows misuse the English language."

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, April 19.—From a woman department store employe the Government today drew testimony linking Alvin Karpis, hunted public enemy No. 1, with the $200,000 Edward G. Bremer kidnaping for which 10 others—among them Arthur (Doc) Barker, named as Karpis' partner—are on trial.

Her testimony came near the end of a session given over chiefly to introduction of exhibits as the Government, which earlier had put in the stories of the victim and his father, laid the foundation for new phases of its case.

Mrs. Florence Humphrey, saleslady in a department store here, identified a photograph of Karpis as that of the man to whom she sold three flashlights. The flashlights, already in evidence, were found on the lonely road near Zumbrota, Minn., where the ransom was paid. The Government contends they were used for signaling.

Introduced in evidence and identified by many witnesses were photographs, besides those of several defendants, of Henry Sawyer, alleged "fingerman"; Harry Campbell, Dr. J. P. Moran, Volney Davis, William Harrison and Karpis, all still sought to answer kidnap charges.

Road maps of the Bensonville, Ill., area, location of the alleged kidnap hideout; of the Portage, Wis., area where gasoline cans alleged to have been tossed out by the fleeing kidnapers were found, and of Minnesota also were presented as evidence.

Police Disperse Crowd In 'Strike' Aftermath

Los Angeles, April 19 (AP).—A turbulent aftermath of the recent anti-war "strike" of university students today resulted in a call for police to disperse a crowd of about 2,000 men and women attempting to obtain an audience with Mayor Frank Shaw.

Spokesmen for the demonstrators said they intended to protest the asserted manhandling by police of two young women involved in the anti-war protest at the University of California at Los Angeles April 12.

Ohio Prison Head Quits After Reinstatement

Columbus, Ohio, April 19 (AP).—Amid a tempest of charges and counter-charges, Preston T. Thomas won momentary reinstatment today as warden of Ohio Penitentiary.

The 64-year-old nationally known penologist then tendered his resignation, effective May 1, as head of the century-old prison from which he was ousted three months ago by National Guardsmen.

The reinstatement and Thomas' resignation halted his bitter fight to win reinstatement in an appeal from 17 charges filed against him.

Forgery Ring Trapped By One Defective Letter

Tulsa, Okla., April 18 (AP).—A defective printed letter "O" proved to be the clew which detectives needed in a $30,000 forgery ring case.

Because of it, police announced today that a Tulsa printshop owner was sought as the "brains" of the forgery gang.

The checks forged strikingly duplicated the forms of such companies as Stanolind Oil but the "O" was different. Three men are in custody.

International Aspect Given D. A. R. Session

English and French Flags Held Aloft as Two Regents Report.

The Forty-fourth Continental Congress of the D. A. R. had an "international incident."

As each State regent made her report, a page girl marched up behind and held aloft the flag of the State which the regent represented.

When Mrs. James B. Mennell, of London, reported as State regent of England, representing the chapters in that country, there was a flag behind her, too.

It was the Union Jack—emblem of the nation which the delegate's forbears defeated in that now distant war—the American Revolution.

The tricolor of France was displayed when Mrs. James Scott Moore reported for the members there—but France was our ally in the Revolution.

• • • •

Mrs. Russell William Magna, retiring president, is still firm in her belief the debt on Constitution Hall will be lifted before the congress adjourns. As last reported the debt had shrunk to $133,000.

• • • •

Throughout the Forty-fourth Continental Congress of the D. A. R., Mrs. Magna is carrying on in the best tradition—despite the strain of knowing that her father, Col. Walter Scott, is seriously ill at his New England home.

Delegates and Mrs. Magna were cheered yesterday morning when it was learned that Mrs. Magna had received a wire notifying her that her father spent a comfortable night.

Col. Scott is missed by the delegates at this session. It was he who contributed the largest planting of boxwood and other shrubs around the D. A. R. buildings in 1926. It was through his generosity that Miss Virginia E. Cantwell, of Washington State, was presented with the only D. A. R. scholarship given to a 4-H Club girl.

It is interesting to know that Col. Scott is past royal chief of the Order of the Scottish Clans of America, and it is an unusual coincidence that his daughter is now retiring after serving as head of a large women's organization.

• • • •

Miss Dorothy DeG. Jenkins, of Germantown, Pa., retiring chairman of pages, was the honor guest of the pages last night at a supper at the Mayflower Hotel. The pages made a gift toward Constitution Hall in honor of Miss Jenkins.

• • • •

It is expected that the annual banquet tonight at the Mayflower will be the largest in D. A. R. history. Mrs. Frederick Reynolds, chairman of the banquet committee, said that 1,500 will attend if accommodations for that many can be made.

• • • •

Mrs. Charles Johnson, of Vermont, has been named to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Lue R. Spencer, of Washington, as vice president general. Mrs. Spencer was elected registrar general.

• • • •

The conservation and thrift committee will journey to the National Historical Grove in Anacostia Park this afternoon at 4 o'clock. There members will plant a tree and inspect the grove.

• • • •

"Git along little daughters, git along, git along" is part of the version of "The Last Round-up" as sung by Mrs. Henry B. Joy, of Michigan, honorary vice president general. Her words apply to rounding up dollars to remove the Constution Hall mortgage. When she sang the song for the congress it was for $100, which went toward the debt ending.

Guard Units Seek Funds for Armories

Veterans Join in Campaign for Federal Aid.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 19.—National Guard units and chapters of veterans' organizations in Virginia are bombarding the White House, the War Department and Virginia members of Congress for money with which to build armories.

The action is in line with a movement launched by the National Guard Association of the United States for the erection of armories out of the $4,880,000,000 recently made available by Congress for relief.

The proposed Virginia program calls for the erection of 15 armories at $2,000,000.

Flag Bill Approved.

After this service the daughters marched out to the C street side of Constitution Hall, where the president general placed a wreath on the national memorial statue.

At a short business session which opened the congress a resolution favoring the bill of Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, requiring that the flag be displayed from the top of all Government buildings, was approved.

Miss Flora P. Fernald, who has been a worker of the organization for 25 years and who has served as secretary to six presidents general, was the subject of another resolution.

Miss Fernald, who is seriously ill, was given praise for her "unfailing loyalty and courtesy and her interest in the welfare of the society." It was resolved that when she is retired she will get a yearly pension of 52½ per cent of her salary.

Building Gains In March Point Way to Revival

Increase of 42.9 Pct. Reported Over the Same Month Last Year.

the fourteenth largest city in the country, according to the last census. In March, permits were issued here for 561 buildings with an estimated value of $2,088,690. Some time ago Washington took the lead in the revival of residential building.

In the list of building permits for March, New York was first, reporting permits for buildings valued at $12,354,592; Los Angeles was second, with permits for buildings valued at $2,637,056, and San Francisco was fourth, with permits for buildings valued at $2,301,947. Nearby Baltimore was well down in the list, reporting permits for 695 buildings valued at $499,240.

The total estimated value of buildings for which permits were issued last month was $60,420,812 or 53.5 per cent greater than in February, when the total was $39,373,083. Of the March total, $20,350,706 was for new residential buildings, an increase of 103.2 per cent over February, and $22,283,658 was for non-residential buildings, an increase of 33.7 per cent over February. The remainder of the March total was for alterations and repairs.

Rise Called More Vigorous.

Dr. Lubin pointed out that an upturn in building operations is to be expected at this season, but, he added, "for the current year the rise was much more vigorous than usual." He pointed out that the increase of 103 per cent over February in the value of residential building for which permits were issued "is the largest percentage increase between these two months that has occurred since 1929."

The Labor Department's statistics were based on reports from 761 cities having a population of 10,000 or more. Governmental building had little effect on the increase, since value of buildings by Federal and State governments in these cities totaled only $3,830,047 last month.

Two direct reasons are assigned for the sharp upturn in new residential building. One is a scarcity of vacant houses and apartments and the other is plentiful credit for building purposes at a comparatively low rate of interest.

As the depression deepened, many families with income either diminished or cut off, gave up their homes or apartments and moved into the homes of relatives. This movement has been in the reverse for a number of months, families that doubled up in 1931 and 1932, separating. Obtaining employment or increased wages in general preceded this movement.

Beginning to Bear Fruit.

Many other persons see in the present cheap money market, and the willingness of mortgage financial institutions to lend, an opportunity either to buy a home or build one better than they now own. It also is contended, in this connection, that the underlying purposes of the Federal Housing Administration legislation are just beginning to bear fruit.

The FHA has affected the situation in three ways, it is contended. Its high-pressure publicity campaign has caused the country to become home-conscious. Under FHA's requirements for insurance of loans, home-owners are able to carry such a loan on a 20-year amortized basis, exclusive of taxes and fire insurance, for $7.50 per $1,000 a month. This has had the effect of reducing the cost of such financing.

The fact that financial institutions may insure such loans with the FHA has created a competition among such lending agencies to get their idle money out.

Authorities at the FHA believe the acceleration in residential building which has set in will continue. They point out that at present between 28 and 33 per cent of all loans they are asked to insure are for new residential building.

District Insists 2 States Share Cost of Bridge

Commissioners Send Note to Governors of Virginia and Maryland.

Cost of construction of a high-level bridge across the Potomac, between Chain Bridge and the District line, should be shared by Maryland and Virginia. The District Commissioners said this in a letter sent yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen to the Governors of Maryland and Virginia.

Four questions were propounded to the Governors by the Commissioners. The Commissioners asked the Governors whether they believed construction of such a bridge was advisable. They asked whether Maryland and Virginia would undertake to provide adequate approach roads connecting their main routes, including U. S. No. 1; whether the Governors were willing to recommend to their Legislatures appropriation of a part of the bridge cost, and, whether they would care to appoint some one to serve on a District-Maryland-Virginia commission to study the question.

Replacement of old Chain Bridge has been the subject of a battle for years. District officials insist the District should not be compelled to construct a bridge costing more than $1,000,000 for the convenience of Maryland and Virginia.

Several Virginia members of the House of Representatives, some of whom are interested in real estate, have fostered the bridge proposal, the entire cost they would have borne by District taxpayers.

Construction of the high level bridge has been urged on the ground that it would provide a way around the National Capital for commercial traffic, particularly heavy trucks.

Construction at the point suggested would involve expenditure of many thousands of dollars by the District for adequate roads within the District, District officials pointed out.

A part of the plan is to bring the District end of the bridge to a point near Morton street, adjacent to the Dalecarlia reservoir. Loughborough road would have to be fixed up and paved with expensive paving designed to withstand the wear and tear of the heavy trucks. New paving also would have to be laid on Nebraska avenue, it was said.

The plan also would divert heavy traffic through some of the few sections of the National Capital which are entirely residential and past expensive homes and estates.

Construction beyond the District line, up the Potomac, about where Massachusetts avenue, extended, and Conduit road conjoin, has been suggested.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 19.—Eighty per cent of the peach crop in the Timberville area of North Rockingham—second only to Crozet in Virginia—was destroyed by the freeze this week, according to the estimate of Howard S. Zigler, former member of the House of Delegates.

Several hundred carloads of peaches are shipped from Timberville during a good season. Only trees in protected places survived the freezing weather of the last three days.

The apple crop at Timberville and on the Chestnut Ridge area east of Harrisonburg was not affected by the freeze. Cherries and other small fruit were badly damaged.

County Worker In Fairfax Gets New Duty Tour

Board Reluctantly Agrees to Permit Transfer of Miss Thomas.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

Miss Sarah E. Thomas, home demonstration agent in Fairfax County for the last six years, has accepted a transfer to Shenandoah County, Va., and will take up her duties there in June or as soon as a successor can be procured.

The transfer was effected at a conference between Miss Belle Burke, district agent for northern Virginia, and county officials. It was stated at the conference that Shenandoah County is starting home demonstration work for the first time, and that the State agent, Miss Maude Wallace, of Blacksburg, Va., requested that Miss Thomas be assigned to that office to handle the organization.

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors reluctantly gave its consent to the transfer, and plans were made for a new agent to have several weeks' training under the direction of Miss Thomas, and it is probable that the new agent will be named at the meeting of the supervisors next month. It was stated that if the change to Shenandoah County is effected June 1, Miss Thomas will return to Fairfax County in July long enough to assist the new agent with the annual 4-H Club camp, which will be held this year at Jamestown.

Miss Thomas, a native of Madison County and a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, is the fourth home demonstration agent for Fairfax County. Miss Roberta Moncure, of Stafford County, served for a short time, but the work was really started by Miss Lucy Steptoe, of Lynchburg, who was later succeeded by Miss Mary Lippafd.

Culpeper Schools Recess.

Board Presses Drink Dealers On Relicensing

Hearing to Be Required Upon Failure to File by May 1 Deadline.

Strict interpretation of the law which requires renewal applications for beer and wine licenses to be filed by May 1 was voted yesterday by the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board.

License holders who do not file their renewal application before May 1 must file a new application just as though they had never had a license and go through the advertising and hearing required by law. Sale of beer after the expiration of the license will result in prosecution, the board decided.

The board acted on 30 renewals yesterday and granted 28. Two license holders were summoned to appear before the board. One licensee is alleged to have sold to minors, and in the other case there is a question whether the licensee is the real owner.

F. H. Pemberton, of Conduit road, and C. H. Chapman, of near Kensington, were granted new licenses. The application of Roy G. Temple, of Silver Spring, was rejected because of indefiniteness of plans, the board said.

All new applications must first be thoroughly investigated by the board's inspector before the license is granted under a new rule adopted. Any person who applies for a license when he is not the owner will be refused if the facts are discovered. If the license is first issued, it will be revoked when it is found that the licensee is not the owner.

The board ordered all liquor dispensaries closed Tuesday, which is an election day in the county, in compliance with the law. The liquor dispensaries are not affected by the closing order of the county commissioners and will remain open today.

A rising vote of thanks also was accorded the veteran Representative Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat, Tennessee, as he stepped from the Speaker's dais after presiding over the committee of the Whole throughout the week of tumultuous debate.

Wadsworth Voices Protest.

Representative Wadsworth, New York, a Republican presidential possibility, sought to kill job insurance taxes for fear they would be used for some other Federal activity.

"We are moving away from democracy and around to a new way of financing the Government," he charged.

Chairman Doughton threw into the breach his oratorical Big Bertha, Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), North Carolina.

"We are confronted with a national question," he protested, "but the distinguished gentleman from New York takes the position that the powers, the agencies and the influence of the Federal Government should not be exerted to meet this clearly national problem.

"The gentleman talked about the Secretary of the Treasury and his use of these funds. He talked about a departure from the traditional functions of the Federal Government. That is the argument that has been advanced against every piece of progressive legislation of the past."

As McCormack finished the House shouted down the Wadsworth amendment.

U.S. Relief Plan Is Wet Nursing, Talmadge Says

Labor Leaders Apologize for His Denouncing of Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, April 19.—Gov. Talmadge, whose hands no longer will touch Federal relief money, today said he was opposed to this "wet nurse arrangement, anyhow."

More than a year ago Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins took administration of the funds from a Talmadge board and set up Miss Gay B. Shepperson as administrator.

Today Hopkins announced the Governor wouldn't even be permitted to represent Georgia with Washington relief authorities. He said Miss Shepperson would be the representative and checks would be drawn to her on the Federal Treasury.

It was only yesterday that the Governor called President Roosevelt "a radical in the extreme" and predicted a third party would participate in the 1936 general elections.

Labor Lashes Talmadge.

During the day the Georgia Federation of Labor, in session at Augusta, lashed out at Talmadge for his utterance against the President, charging Talmadge "went so far as to insultingly refer to Roosevelt's unfortunate personal affliction."

Lauding the President's efforts to restore prosperity to the country, the labor body expressed its "deep regret in this unwarranted and contemptible action on the part of Gov. Talmadge."

"We desire to say to Gov. Talmadge," the resolution read, "that President Roosevelt's acts have clearly demonstrated that his heart and head are in no way afflicted and with apologies to the rest of the Nation, we regret that we can not say the same for the present Governor of Georgia."

Heretofore, under the relief setup in Georgia, Gov. Talmadge has been giving his approval to projects submitted by Miss Shepperson and the money has gone through his hands to Miss Shepperson.

"The country knows I'm opposed to this wet nurse arrangement anyhow," Talmadge said after being informed of Hopkins' action. "Wet nursing is not a proper function of government and I'm a Democrat and I'm agin' it, regardless of who or what party advocates it."

It was explained at Washington that Miss Shepperson's jurisdiction is confined to direct relief administration, which after June 1 will become work-relief.

A board already has been named by Gov. Talmadge to handle the State's activities under the new $4,880,000,000 program soon to be placed in operation.

State Gets April Quota.

The Governor expressed the belief that Georgia would get its full share of the huge sum. "The Georgia delegation in Congress," he said, "is able and competent to see that Georgia receives her pro-rata share of any benefits voted for the entire United States."

Ickes yesterday withdrew PWA funds from the State.

Differences between Talmadge and Hopkins are of long standing. They have taken pot-shots at each other through the press and at one time Hopkins termed Talmadge "a yapper." Talmadge has said he thought Hopkins would resign.

Simultaneously with the announcement that Talmadge had been cut off from the handling of relief funds, Hopkins announced the April quota for the State, previously held up, has been made available. This amounts to $1,700,000.

Gov. Talmadge took the afternoon off to visit his farm.

Glen Echo Prepares To Build Firehouse

Board Will Open Wrecking Bids on May 10.

Construction of a $20,000 firehouse at Glen Echo will be started in the near future, Henry T. McCuen, president of the Conduit Road Fire Board announced yesterday. Bids for the wrecking and removal of the old house in Vassar Circle will be opened May 10 at 8 p. m.

The new firehouse will provide additional quarters for the Glen Echo Volunteer Fire Department which now furnishes protection for an area including property assessed at more than $2,000,000.

Funds for the building were secured from the Public Works Administration by the fire board with the cooperation of Senator Tydings.

Steel Company Idle As Strikers Negotiate

Monroe, Mich., April 19 (AP).—Operations of the Newton Steel Co. were halted today as union employes who walked out yesterday as a protest against curtailment of company paid "helpers," negotiated with plant officials.

The plant was shut down after 700 rolling mill employes walked out. It was estimated 1,800 men were idle today.

Union officials were expected to confer with plant executives over the week-end in an effort to settle difference in time to start operations Monday.

Blind Musician Alters Plea in Wife Slaying

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., April 19.—Jim Strother, colored, blind musician, of Culpeper, accused of fatally shooting his wife, Blanche Strother on the night of April 2, who entered a plea of guilty at a hearing before Justice Reams, changed his plea to not guilty when brought before the grand jury.

Strother explained that he meant to frighten his wife and had aimed where he believed her feet to be. Strother will be tried on Monday. C. M. Waite and Burnett Miller, Jr., were appointed by the court to defend the prisoner.

Jim Martin and Phila Hanna, expert Illinois executioner.

Hanna, whose duty it was to adjust the noose, told spectators that "I've never seen nor heard anything like it. I've supervised nearly 100 executions but I never had anything go through me like that fellow's talk."

As the time drew near for Sheriff Heater to spring the trap, DeBoe was told he should prepare to go.

"Just let me smoke a cigarette, and then I'll be ready," he said.

He was handed a lighted cigarette by Martin. In silence he puffed and then nonchalantly tossed it down to the ground 10 feet below. Fifty persons within the inclosure were waved back from the scaffold. They were asked to remove their hats. Many obeyed. Others did not.

DeBoe turned to the sheriff and said: "I'm ready." He then surveyed the group below the scaffold. He saw his father, M. T. DeBoe, of Paducah, and his 19-year-old sister. "Good-by, Dad. Good-by, Sis. I know you love me and would take my place if you could—that's the kind of love I hold for you, too. It's too bad things had to end this way, but I'll see you in heaven, I hope."

Trap Is Sprung.

Hanna adjusted the noose. The chaplain began to recite the Lord's Prayer. DeBoe's lips were set in a tight line as the black cap was placed over his face. Jailer Martin and McCandless stepped back to the edge of the platform.

"Are you ready?" Sheriff Heater asked. There was no answer. The sheriff sprung the trap. DeBoe plunged through. His body snapped to an abrupt stop 8 feet below the platform. His neck was broken. He was pronounced dead 11 minutes later.

As the body was cut down the crowd dwindled. An hour later this town of 500 population appeared nearly deserted.

A hearse carried DeBoe's body to Paducah, where he will be buried on Easter Sunday.

The crowd began gathering from neighboring communities and States shortly after midnight. The town's three cafes were crowded most of the night. One had to close because it sold out all of its food. Likewise, the Smithland beer garden placed a rush order to near-by Paducah for additional beer as the town's supply ran low.

One hundred special deputy sheriffs, reinforced by six special policemen from Paducah and six State officers, patrolled the town's one main street.

About 3:30 a. m. DeBoe was brought here under heavy guard from the State prison at Eddysville, also near-by. A few minutes after his arrival he was given a breakfast of ham and eggs, a cup of coffee and a soft drink. An hour later he asked for aspirin.

Visited by Father, Sister.

A half hour later his father and sister visited him in his cell.

"We'll be there to the last, boy," the father said.

"I knew," DeBoe answered, "that you'd stick to the last."

At 5:30 a. m. Sheriff Heater visited his cell and read the death warrant. Six deputies lined near his cell, and Sheriff Heater said:

"Well, boy, it's time to go."

DeBoe was 22.

The rumors, which were not confirmable, persisted that he had not been seen outside the castle for the last two days and that doctors have called there frequently.

Dog Crawls to Church To Die Before Pulpit

By the United Press.

Detroit, April 19.—Death disrupted the Lenten services of the Rev. A. M. Meikle today in the First Congregational Church here.

The services had just begun when, through an open door at the rear a big German shepherd dog entered with a bewildered and dazed stare in his eyes.

Slowly the dog crawled down the aisle. Not a person impeded his progress as he made his way toward the pulpit, glancing ahead and whimpering.

At the foot of the pulpit he halted, whined once, licked a church assistant's hand and died from injuries received when an automobile struck him in the street just outside the church.

Long Will Answer Ickes in Senate Monday; Debate Limited.

communities have contributed some money. There are, however, nine other States which do not contribute State funds. They are Alabama, Florida, Kansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Carolina and South Dakota.

In February, the last month for which complete figures are available, there were 69,978 Georgia families on relief. This figure had dropped from 77,007 in January. Last year the Federal Government contributed $20,357,009 to relief in Georgia, local communities in that State contributed $962,266, and the State contributed nothing.

The controversy with Pennsylvania, which Hopkins insists must contribute $5,000,000 a month, appeared to be suspended temporarily with the announcement that funds would be transferred to provide one month's contribution. Yesterday, however, Hopkins had made no move to allot relief money to that State. A similar controversy between Hopkins and Illinois appeared to be still deadlocked.

Hastings, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, told the Senate that State administrations "refuse to believe what the New Deal demands they believe — that Mr. Roosevelt is anointed from on high."

"The Roosevelt Administration," he said, "is starting in early to play politics with the huge sum voted it, not for the perpetuation of a political machine but for relieving honest distress throughout the country.

"A rose by any other name smells just as well and politics played at the expense of human misery, no matter what the excuse, smells badly and is nauseous to every right thinking person in the country.

Asserts Citizens Suffer.

"It is obvious that the Roosevelt Administration before it launches on a repitition of buying votes as it did in the last elections, intends to punish those who refuse to be bought into ready approval of the crazy-quilt schemes of a ruinous National Administration.

"It is lamentable that in venting its spleen against political enemies, unfortunate citizens must be denied a measure of the relief Congress voted for everyone who is distressed without first finding out whether they subscribed to the unsound and rapidly failing policies of the New Deal. The American people will not long stand for this kind of thing."

Roosevelt Silent.

President Roosevelt at his press conference declined to comment on the relief controversy except to repeat his statement that he was against mixing politics and relief.

Following appointment of Miss Shepperson as Georgia relief administrator, Hopkins sent her $1,500,000 for the State's needs in April.

From Georgia, the Associated Press reported that Talmadge expressed himself as certain that the State would receive its share of the $4,880,000,000 works fund. At the same time the Georgia Federation of Labor adopted resolutions assailing Talmadge.

Representative Castellow (Democrat), Georgia, said he did not believe the needy should be punished because of a controversy between State and Federal officials.

By the United Press.

An "epithet to end epithets" was urged by Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, in comment last night on the increasing tendency of New Dealers to resort to name calling.

The New Dealers need to add dignity to their other accomplishments, Maverick believes, asserting the whole country is bored at the wave of "underslung language" started by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in his radio attack on Senator Huey Long and Father Charles Coughlin.

Statesmen, such as Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, add nothing to their stature when they start referring to Senator Long as diseased with "halitosis of the intellect," the Texan said. He was equally bored with FERA Administrator Harry Hopkins, who said that "Pennsylvania gives me a pain in the neck," and that those who oppose "boon doggling" are "simply too damn dumb to appreciate the higher things of life."

"I say that this language is entirely uncalled for," Maverick exploded.

"The people are entitled to know what we are doing. Harsh language is arousing class against class, section against section, and friend against friend.

"It must stop and stop soon."

Defying Ickes, Assemblymen Pass Long Bills

Few Voices Lifted Against Giving Huey Control of U. S. Funds.

Baton Rouge, La., April 19.—Despite the threat of Secretary Ickes to withhold Public Works Administration funds from Louisiana, Senator Huey P. Long's Legislature today put all but the finishing touches on bills to give him control of Federal moneys spent in the State in the future.

Ickes yesterday said Long had "halitosis of the intellect," and was met today by a statement from the Senator that he would answer Ickes on the floor of the Senate Monday at Washington.

Another measure would give the "Kingfish" supervision over the finances of all parishes and municipalities, aimed principally at the antagonistic New Orleans City rule of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

Only one measure was delayed, that giving the State administration absolute contro' of Louisiana's election machinery, but it was expected to go through, possibly with drastic amendment, before sine die adjournment tomorrow about noon.

The Senate today rapidly passed 19 of Long's bills already given House approval and adjourned until tomorrow at 10 a. m., to pass six other bills making minor changes in existing laws.

The House is scheduled to meet at 10:20 a. m., tomorrow to concur in Senate amendments to the bills bringing to a close the fifth of Long's "special" sessions in the past nine months—sessions which made him absolute dictator of State affairs.

National Guardsmen, enforcing martial law here since January 25, when anti-Long citizens rose in armed revolt, still guarded the legislative chambers.

Senator Coleman Lindsey, administration floor leader, gave no reason for returning the election control bill to the calendar, but it was expected it would come up for final passage tomorrow when amendments may be made.

A companion election bill, changing the personnel of the New Orleans board of supervisors of elections, was passed, thus indicating the chief election bill would also be passed.

Only 1 Bill Opposed.

The elections measure directs parish boards of supervisors of election, controlled through gubernatorial appointment, to name five commissioners to supervise polling and counting of ballots. Opposing candidates, under the present law, are permitted to submit names of commissioners for drawing, thus giving each side representation.

Serious debate developed during the day on only one measure, that giving the State control of the borrowing or expenditure of Federal work relief funds. The measure also gives the State supervision over all finances of local governing bodies.

Senator-elect Clement C. Moss, anti-administrationist of Lake Charles, contended that as the local bodies collected their taxes they should be permitted to expend them. He also declared that the bill threatened to cut off Federal relief to the State.

"There are Federal funds which are now coming into Louisiana which probably will be stopped," he said. "I have been informed that some funds have already been stopped.

"If this bill is passed the State of Louisiana will seriously suffer. The $4,880,000,000 relief bill has recently been enacted by Congress. If the State gets no share of that money you can take the responsibility."

Senator Lindsey said, "To my mind, it is absurd to say the Federal Government will change its administration of relief funds because the State of Louisiana is trying to attend to its own affairs."

That bill, along with the other major administration measures, was passed by a vote of 29 to 10.

AAA Revision May Be Balked By Byrd Fight

Senate Group's Favorable Report Held Up; Hope of Passage Dims.

It was learned last night that one motive behind the delayed report of Senator Smith is an effort to work out an amendment that will satisfy the complaints of the Virginia Senator.

Opposition among New England and Southern Senators to the cotton processing tax and refusal of the Administration to do anything about it has increased anti-AAA feeling in the Senate, and in the same degree strengthened Byrd's hand.

The amendments already have encountered rough treatment in the House, where they were recalled by the Agriculture Committee after a favorable report. They will come up for action by the group again this week.

Until the AAA amendments are reported in the Senate, that chamber has nothing before it except the Bankhead farm tenant aid bill and a host of controversial non-Administration measures, such as the Black 30-hour-week and the Costigan antilynching bill.

Tenant Aid Bill Opposed.

Opposition was crystallized against the tenant aid bill yesterday to such an extent that it was with difficulty Senator Robinson obtained a limitation of debate on the measure when the Senate resumes Monday.

Here also, Senator Byrd is taking a leading role in the opposition. On Monday he will move to send this $1,050,000,000 measure back to committee.

Seeking to aid 3,000,000 farm tenants, share croppers and laborers, the bill authorizes the President to subscribe $50,000,000 from work relief funds in a new Federal farm corporation. The corporation in turn would be authorized to issue $1,000,000,000 in bonds, fully guaranteed by the Government as to principal and interest. Loans at low rates would be made to tenants to buy their farms from absentee landlords and equip them with buildings, machinery and live stock.

Senator Byrd charges the bill carries a potential cost to the Government of $15,000,000,000.

Churches Join In Good Friday Services Here

Passion Ceremonies of 3 Hours Followed at Night by Music.

With three-hour passion services in every section of the city and night services of music, Washington churches yesterday commemorated Good Friday, the day of Christ's crucifixion.

In many districts churches joined in neighborhood passion services. The Washington Methodist episcopal churches combined for a three-hour service in the afternoon at Foundry Church. The Rev. Benjamin W. Meeks, district superintendent, presided. A large audience took part in the service.

Hundreds of Easter visitors to the Capital visited Washington Cathedral, where three-hour services were conducted by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington.

Churches of the Southwest section joined in services at Grace Episcopal Church, with ministers of three denominations preaching.

Outdoor services conducted by the Catholic Evidence Guild at Franklin Park yesterday afternoon were attended by hundreds of worshipers, representing many religions and denominations.

Special musical programs were high lights of last night's services. In many of the churches Stainer's "The Crucifixion," one of the most popular of Good Friday choral compositions, was sung. Another widely known cantata, "The Seven Last Words of Christ," by Dubois, was sung at Good Friday services in the Church of the Covenant. It was also presented last night by the choir of Christ's Church.

Labor Chairman Hits Wagner Bill

Chicago Leader Asks for Change in Section.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 19.—Dr. William H. Spencer, chairman of the Chicago regional labor board, advocated today a revision of section 7(a) of the NRA to protect the workers' right of association against "interference either from his employer or his fellow worker."

Dean of the University of Chicago School of Business, he embodied his views in a pamphlet in which he opposed a feature of the pending Wagner bill which he felt "would for all practical purposes outlaw company unions."

He suggested development of a labor board separate from the NRA empowered to pursue "educative mediation" rather than to force collective agreements upon employers.

D. C. Day Assured In House Monday

Conference on Supply and Motorists' Bills Delayed.

Passage of the social security bill by the House yesterday assured District day on Monday, while scheduled conferences on two District bills went over until the first of the week.

Conferees on the District supply bill and the motorists' financial responsibility bill postponed parleys because of the absence of Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, and because members had other engagements.

Representative Henry Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, yesterday announced he would seek to amend the P. W. A. loan bill when it is brought up Monday in order to authorize the District Commissioners to borrow $100,000 for the rehabilitation of Children's Hospital.

Simultaneously he filed a report on the bill, which has already passed the Senate, authorizing the Commissioners to borrow an unnamed amount for construction of new court buildings in Judiciary Square.

Two other men were arrested on warrants and charged with operating a lottery—Heiskell R. Gray, 32, of the 2200 block Minnesota avenue southeast, and Andrew A. Brossman, 37, of the 700 block Fourteenth street northwest.

Il Duce Is Told Austria Wants Army of 80,000

Restoration of Monarchy Also Is Pressed by Von Starhemberg.

Copyright by the United Press.

Rome, April 19.—Permission to build a volunteer Austrian Army of at least 80,000 men was demanded by Vice Chancellor Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg of Premier Benito Mussolini today.

It was learned that the youthful Starhemberg in an hour's audience with Il Duce at Venice Palace said he also desires to keep his semi-Fascist Heimwehr (home guards) intact.

The parley was private, but it was learned the vice chancellor—strongly pro-Fascist and a disciple of Mussolini's form of government—said should Austria be allowed additional forces, his Heimwehr would remain the basis for a framework for the projected rebuilt army.

Other aspects of Austria's ambition to follow Germany in rearmament were discussed, such as the organization of a force to meet special Austrian needs.

However, Prince von Starhemberg did not seek permission from Italy and the other allies to form a conscript army, similar to Adolf Hitler's scheme in Germany, feeling that might complicate his own position and eventually deprive him of the command of Austria's armed forces by insertion of several members of the old Austrian general staff.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 19.—"A cordial colloquy of more than an hour" between Benito Mussolini and Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, Europe's chief exponent of Fascism, today served to emphasize official Italy's growing sentiment for restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty in Austria.

Von Starhemberg talked to Il Duce, it was learned, about the Hapsburgs, Austria's rearmament and the forthcoming Danubian conference in Rome.

It is freely conceded here that Italian officialdom looks upon eventual restoration of the monarchy in Austria as the only means of staving off Austria's union with Germany.

Austrian circles said tonight, however, that Von Starhemberg's report on prospects for an immediate restoration was not entirely fatvorable.

Russians Want French Pledge Of Armed Help

Issue Delays Agreement on Mutual Assistance Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 19.—Soviet Russia's desire for a virtual military alliance with France today troubled the statesmen who are drafting the Franco-Russian mutual assistance pact.

The initialing of the pact's text had been planned for tomorrow. It was learned in high quarters, however, that the Moscow government is reluctant to drop the idea of "automatic" aid in the event either nation becomes involved in war.

Officials here confirmed that the difficulties are mainly "geographical," indicating that France is seeking specific reservations to any promise to help defend Russia's frontiers.

The Russian foreign commissar, Maxim Litvinoff, surprised the foreign office here by starting for Moscow from Geneva. He was expected to come to Paris.

Foreign Minister Pierre Laval conferred anew today with Soviet Ambassador Potemkine, who may initial the text of the agreement, but it seemed unlikely the document would be ready tomorrow.

The general outline of the agreement with Russia was approved by the cabinet and Laval expects to sign the text when he goes to Moscow May 6.

The cabinet was in session for three hours in a study of the agreement. The French are known to be insisting on some modification of the "automatic" clauses, leaving each signatory free to decide in doubtful cases if military aid is required. There was indication that France does not want to engage in advance to become involved in any Russian frontier troubles.

There was new talk of restoring the Hapsburg monarchy in Austria as Prince Ernst von Starhemberg—Austrian vice chancellor, Fascist leader and outspoken monarchist—met Benito Mussolini in Rome. A growing sentiment for restoration in Austria was evident in official circles.

Officer Has Information on Crawford Accomplice.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., April 19.—On information received from Spotsylvania authorities, Commonwealth's Attorney John Galleher went to Fredericksburg today to follow a clew which he said he hoped would lead to the identification of Joe Jackson, colored, as an accomplice of George Crawford in the murder of Mrs. Spencer Ilsley and Mrs. Mary Buckner in the former's cottage at Middleburg in 1933.

Jackson was indicted in the killing of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Coleman and is being held at Richmond. Crawford insisted in his confession that a Negro that he knew only by the name of Jackson was the murderer of the two women. European News Hardest to Get, 3 Tell Editors Brains, Courage, Spying Needed, Correspondents Declare Here.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

How to be a foreign correspondent in three lessons took up the attention of 100 newspaper editors yesterday. Gathering at the National Press Club for the thirteenth annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, they heard from mild, bespectacled Raymond Gram Swing, from hawk-nosed Paul Scott Mowrer, and from blonde and energetic Dorothy Thompson what it takes to cover turbulent Europe in the midst of what Miss Thompson dubbed "the age of propaganda."

These three former correspondents painted a composograph of the correspondent of today, whose main characteristics differ considerably from the dashing young man of the Richard Harding Davis era. Miss Thompson thought he must have some of the adventurer in him, but she agreed with the others that his main attribute should be brains. All three pleaded with the editors to keep their best men in Europe, whence comes, despite the isolationists, the news which, they said, helps to shape the destiny of the United States.

Plead for Intelligence.

There are, said Mr. Swing, now Washington correspondent of The Nation, but once a foreign correspondent himself, four ways to get news out of Europe.

One is to fake it, which is frowned upon. Another is to have an ingratiating personality so that statesmen just rush up and tell you all. A third way is play bridge so well that Stanley Baldwin's secretary tells you what's going to happen between the deal and the final trick of the rubber.

But the best way is to know European history, to study men and events, so that when something happens you don't have to rush around Downing street asking why, but can sit down and write a news account based on an intelligent understanding of the situation.

Mr. Mowrer, who is an associate editor of the Chicago Daily News, Herr Hitler having asked him to go home, was called one of the intelligent type by Mr. Swing. He said that above all else the foreign correspondent must be a good newspaperman, born in America, so that he will able to write of Europe in American terms, and with a gift for politics, tempered with a liking for economics, and with the ability to make friends. He said that the reporter who can go to a man in high places and prove to him that he knows what he is talking about will get the news.

Radio Seen Propaganda Tool.

Miss Thompson, who angered Herr Hitler, and who, in private life, is Mrs. Sinclair Lewis, stressed the need for intelligence, but added, from her own experience, that the reporter in Europe needs courage also. She painted a drab picture of Europe dominated by propaganda, saying that dictatorships are ruled by two things—terror, and the written or spoken word. She said that one of the most significant events in recent Europe was that when Dolfuss was murdered the first thing the Nazis did was to seize, not an arsenal nor a powder factory, but a radio station. And the first thing they did with it, she said, was to lie. But, she said, they had a precedent in Dolfuss' own acts in this. A few months before he had driven out the Socialists and used the radio himself to lie about it.

The American newspaperman in Europe must maintain his ideals, Miss Thompson said. The American newsman, no matter how cynical, deeply believes that his function is to present facts. But this ideal is not even known in Europe, she said, making the work of a reporter there doubly difficult. The radio, the press, the movies are used for propaganda and reporters who would go against this power are in danger even of losing their own lives. The greatest menace in dictator-ruled Europe, though, is the radio rather than the press, she said. Printed words, she said, can be circulated; but there are only so many air waves and the radio can, and is, controlled by governments for their own ends.

"Reporters Must Spy."

In dictator-ridden Europe, the reporter, Miss Thompson said, is less a newspaperman than he is a spy. If he is to get any news, he has to be. She urged editors to send their best men to tell the truth about Europe and to support them with all their strength. Miss Thompson told briefly some of her experiences while representing various magazines in Germany before her exile.

Following the lectures on European correspondenceship, the editors sat down in closed sesion and had a coy little shop talk, some of the subjects being "The Worst That Can Be Said About Today's Newspapers," "Are We Afraid of Radio?" and "The Rise of the Demagogue and What We Ought to Do About It." Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times; Marlen Pew, of Editor and Publisher, and Arthur Krock, of the New York Times, led this skeleton-rattling.

Last evening the National Press Club and the editors played the host to Cabinet members, Vice President Garner, Speaker Byrns and a few Senators who paid an informal visit to the clubrooms, during which speeches were barred. Vaudeville acts were offered, including the singing of spirituals by Negro members of the CCC camp at Alexandria, Va.

Connecticut Tercentenary Stamps Issued

Harris & Ewing.

A new series of stamps, in honor of Connecticut's tercentenary, started to leave the presses at the Bureau of Engraving yesterday. Senator Augustine Lonergan (left), of Connecticut, was on hand for the occasion, and so was Third Assistant Postmaster General Eilenberger. But Postmaster General Farley—remember the stamp mixup?—was nowhere to be seen.

Glass Launches Bank Bill Quiz As G. O. P. Bolts

House Minority Decides to Protest 'Political' Control Feature.

As Senator Glass began hearings yesterday on the banking bill Republicans of the House Banking Committee decided to file a minority report against the "political" controls that the measure would set up in the Federal Reserve Board over the country's currency and credit.

House leaders, however, expect to put the entire bill through intact, Chairman Steagall, of the House Banking Committee insisting that President Roosevelt wants it.

If so, he has changed his attitude, according to Senator Glass, chairman of the Senate Banking subcommittee which opened its hearings with Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, as the first witness. As many as 50 witnesses may be heard.

Crowley urged making permanent the temporary insurance covering insurance deposits up to $5,000. He asked for power to cancel the insurance of an unsoundly-managed bank. He was questioned by Senators Glass and Couzens on the advisability of this broad power, but said its exercise would "seldom be necessary."

Glass Wants Alterations.

Whether Mr. Roosevelt is for the bill in its entirety remains a mystery. Glass means to break it up into three parts, putting through two, one extending deposit insurance and the other containing uncontested amendments to the national bank law. He seeks to defeat, or at least postpone action on title 2 to which House Republicans object.

The real battle centers on this title, which would make the Reserve Board supreme in the management of money and credit by giving it exclusive power over open market operations, excluding, except in an advisory way, governors of the several Reserve Banks or other "private" bankers. Moreover, the President would have power to remove the Reserve Board's governor at any time, thus insuring Administration control over this important post.

The American Bankers Association (while accepting most of the bill) and others are centering fire on this "control," which would mark a complete break with the past theory of the system. As it would be a vital step in Administration plans for a managed currency, its importance is evident.

Unless Glass is correct in assuming that the President in fact does not insist upon it, or unless he can maneuver Title II into a pigeonhole, it is almost certain to pass. A majority of the Senate is either for it or for even stronger centralized authority.

Described as Eccles Bill.

Glass calls it the Eccles bill, and today Crowley, when questioned by Glass, said it was not his idea to have the insurance part incorporated in an omnibus measure.

Explaining his request for power to close a mismanaged insured bank, Crowley said:

"If the corporation finds that an insured bank is engaged in repeated practices detrimental to its depositors, the corporation should not be placed in the position of sanctioning such practices, but should be given the right to terminate the insurance of the bank's deposits without jeopardizing the depositors. For the protection of depositors we have recommended that in such cases insurance be extended for two years from the time that membership in the fund is terminated."

Crowley read a prepared statement, commenting on the sections of the bill affecting insurance, and concluded:

"There are two courses open to the insurance corporation. It can be a charitable institution which will pay for the mistakes, bad banking and dishonesty of bankers, in which case the cost of the insurance must be set so high that it will be an injustice to every sound bank. Or the corporation may be used as an instrument to improve the standards of bank management and reduce the losses to depositors through bank failures. The latter course, which I prefer, requires that the standard of bank supervision throughout the country be improved, and that the corporation be given the right to protect itself against excessive risks, and, finally, that the corporation be not handicapped by taking into the fund banks which are unsound or by continuing in the fund banks which are mismanaged."

Orangeburg, S. C., April 19.—Available records were searched today to find a parallel to the birth of a 16-pound baby here, but without result.

The baby was born to Mrs. George Browning. He was 24 inches tall and measured 16 inches around the chest.

Dr. A. W. Browning, the attending physician, reported both mother and son "doing nicely."

Scrap Monroe Doctrine, Journalist Advocates

Official abandonment of the Monroe Doctrine as the first requisite for a program of cooperative Pan-Americanism was suggested last night by Gaston Nerval, Latin-American journalist, in an address before the Washington Public Affairs Forum.

He reviewed recent developments in international friendships between the governments of the Americas, and admitted the gains made under the Roosevelt-Hull Administration.

Senators Push A Law to Curb Lobby Menace

Strict Control Provided in Plan to End Deluge of Propaganda.

Harassed by lobbyists and deluged by lobby mail on a score of major measures, a few harried Senators have decided to do something about it.

What they plan to do is aplenty. A Senate judiciary sub-committee has favorably reported a control measure that would put a serious crimp in the lobby market. A meeting of the full committee is scheduled for Monday, to give right of way to the measure.

Sponsored by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, the bill would require all lobbyists to register with the clerk of the House, the Secretary of the Senate and the Federal Trade Commission.

They must give name and address, the person or organization employing them, how much they are paid, and what their expenses are.

Senators Not Only Victims.

Just to keep the records straight, they must file at the end of every month a detailed financial statement together with an accounting of all money spent for entertainment of officials, and the papers or periodicals in which they get articles published.

Not only members of Congress, but various Government officials and Cabinet officers have complained of a "propaganda" deluge of lobbyists in recent weeks, aimed alike at legislation and departmental action. It has grown steadily worse ever since Father Charles E. Coughlin caused an avalanche of anti-World Court literature to descend on the Capital several weeks ago.

Even Secretary of State Cordell Hull was forced to complain early this week when Washington offices were flooded with letters from potato growers, protesting a threatened reduction in the potato duty. Secretary Hull avoided criticism of the letter writers, but accused a Washington potato lobby of inspiring the protests by circulating "rumors and false statements."

Provides Prison Terms.

The Black bill provides a $5,000 fine or 12-month imprisonment penalty for any lobbyist who fails to register, and two years' imprisonment for lobbyists making false affidavits.

Black defines "lobbyists" as "one who shall engage for pay, or for any consideration, to attempt to influence legislation, or to prevent legislation by the National Congress, or to influence any Federal bureau, agency, Government official or Government employe to make, modify, alter or cancel any contract with the United States Government or any United States bureau, agency or official, as such official, or influence any such bureau, agency or official in the administration of any governmental duty, so as to give any benefit or advantage to any corporation or individual."

Dr. Scudder, Missionary, Dies.

New York, April 19 (AP).—The Rev. Dr. Lewis R. Scudder, medical missionary to India for almost 50 years, died Thursday of a heart attack, according to word received today by the Board of Missions of the Reformed (Dutch) Church in America. He was 73.

Tragic.

When representatives of Southern farmers and New England manufacturers alike express their dissatisfaction with both the theory and the administration of the AAA, and when Mr. Chester Davis attributes it all to the machinations of the public utilities, one is tempted to smile. So palpable an attempt to make his critics unpopular indicates that the administrator must entirely misunderstand the fundamental reasons for the exposed position in which the AAA finds itself.

Hasn't it perhaps begun to dawn on some of those responsible for the law and its administration that what they are attempting is impossible? The whole plan, whether it be acreage reduction, processing taxes, bonuses for noncultivation, or actual destruction of raw materials and foodstuffs, revolves around a central and fundamental weakness. The weakness is that responsibility for the price level is not and can not be a proper function of the American form of Government. No democratically chosen government can satisfy both producers and consumers of its justice and its wisdom in acting as an arbiter of prices. The Administration that assumes this responsibility is slated for popular repudiation or, if it continues to hold power, for disaster.

The cardinal mistake of Mr. Hoover, which probably contributed much to the present demoralization in the Republican Party, was his assumption of this same function of attempting to regulate the price level, although in a very minor degree as compared with the present Administration. When he put forth his famous Farm Board to stabilize wheat and cotton prices at $1.25 for wheat and 17 cents for cotton, he signed the doom of his Administration.

Those who are familiar with the experience of the War Industries Board in 1918 will well remember the hot spot in which the Hon. George R. James found himself. Mr. James, now a member of the Federal Reserve Board and formerly an outstanding merchant and banker of Memphis, Tenn., was put in charge of cotton. Though he is a man of unusual good nature and broad urbanity, as well as genial humanity, the constant exhortations of Southern politicians in behalf of fixing the price of cotton at 25 cents whenever it went below that figure, followed by indignant and vicious attacks against price-fixing by the Government when the price rose substantially above the 25-cent level, sorely tried Mr. James' patience. There were those who got a great deal of entertainment out of these recurrent episodes. But to the Hon. George R. James they were tragic.

It always will prove tragic to the responsible administrators when the Government undertakes the impossible in a big way.

In the Name of Childhood.

"For the past several months," says a recent communique from the Children's Bureau, this division of the Department of Labor "has been giving more intensive consideration to the problems of unemployed youth." This development of the bureau's scope is cited as justification for a far-reaching expansion of its work in the field of training projects for unemployed between 18 and 25 years of age.

It is no criticism of the excellent accomplishments of the Children's Bureau in its proper sphere to deny categorically the desirability of this proposed development under its auspices. The bureau, as it ought to realize by this time, made a mistake in sponsoring a child labor amendment which would have put the employment of boys and girls as old as 18 under its authority. But instead of learning from the fate of this amendment, the present serious emergency for unemployed youths is taken as an excuse for extending the control of the bureau to men and women up to the age of 25. Before the Children's Bureau embarks on this ambitious program it might at least change its name to fit its proposed functions.

The logical Federal agency for the correlation of relief projects for unemployed youths is the U. S. Office of Education. Under its present commissioner, Dr. John W. Studebaker, that office is in intimate touch with the public school authorities throughout the country. And the local schools provide the only existing agency which can be expected to give efficient assistance in handling the problem of adolescent unemployed. The field for the Children's Bureau in this connection is cooperation in developing more adequate placement divisions for juveniles in the U. S. Employment Service which, like the bureau, is a branch of the Department of Labor.

Loose administrative procedure and attempts of Federal agencies to take over functions for which they are not qualified provide not the least of the explanations for the confusion and lost motion now so apparent in the New Deal.

Not Dead, Only Ailing.

Gen. Johnson has explained to the Senate Finance Committee that he never asserted the "NRA is as dead as a dodo." It was the post-Johnson administration of the NRA which he dismissed in this summary fashion. Consequently, he sees no inconsistency in appearing before the committee with a warning that abolition of the recovery act would mean a return to economic chaos.

Although the general's testimony was brightened by a few colorful phrases, he was not diverted from his very serious task of defending industrial regulation as opposed to a system of unregulated competition. He was particularly convincing in his refutation of charges that codes are destructive of small businesses.

It is, as he says, usually the big fellows who benefit by rebates, special prices, and purchase-control provisions such as the codes seek to abolish or at least to discourage. Admitted mistakes in administering the recovery act are, in the general's opinion, not an argument in favor of resurrection of the antitrust laws. Far from aiding the little fellow, he believes that a reversion to a discarded system of enforced competition would encourage progressive concentration of industry in the future, as it undoubtedly has in the past.

Whatever the theoretical advantages of free competition, any economist with a realistic knowledge of the facts of our industrial development, and every intelligent business executive, knows that these benefits are largely illusory under modern systems of large-scale production. Efforts to compel industry to compete when it preferred to set limits to competition have fostered secret agreements and actually hastened the amalgamation of competing units to the detriment of the small man. The question now before the country is not whether we shall have industrial freedom or supervised regulation. It is whether we shall return to an irregular and often illegal form of trade restraint, which fostered combinations, or try to improve upon the imperfect beginnings of a system of regulated competition.

Assuming that the latter alternative is the only feasible solution of our industrial problems, Gen. Johnson has offered a large number of recommendations designed to clarify the law and to reform administrative practices under the NRA. His suggestion that the collective bargaining provisions of the recovery act be entirely segregated from those dealing with fair trade practices and that they be administered by the National Labor Relations Board are particularly worthy of study.

Certainly, if restrictions upon hours of labor and control over wage rates are to be retained—and even Congressmen hostile to the recovery law favor that procedure—there is no possibility of returning to a system of free competition under which all production costs are determined by market bids and offers. Partial regulation of costs, however, without control over production to prevent destructive price cutting, would seriously impair profits. And, as Gen. Johnson says, inadequate regulation "may lead to abolition of the profit system, and after that page Mr. Stalin."

The Quality of Mercy.

After a careful study of the sordid statistics, William Seals, secretary to the House sub-committee on local crime conditions, finds that the Capital has an even more enviable record for leniency—or laxness—toward law infraction than most casual observers suspected; a record which is enviable, needless to say, from the point of view of the offender. According to Mr. Seals' computations, as quoted by Representative Schulte, for those who commit felonies in the District the chances are 2 to 1 against arrest and 15 to 1 against a jail sentence.

These figures almost make a citizen hesitate to indorse the kindly theory that it is better that ten guilty men should escape rather than that one innocent man should be punished. A really sporting criminal would scorn to stage a felony in any city where the odds are as heavily in his favor as is the case in Washington. Unfortunately, the average criminal is, in the nature of the case, a poor sport. So the carnival of crime continues almost within sound of the lawmakers' earnest voices.

For how long? "The quality of mercy is not strained"—the strain is on the patience of the law-abiding public.

Not Tempered Steel.

Perhaps no Governor in any of the 48 States has a harder job than Harry W. Nice at Annapolis. Equipped with rather meager experience as an executive, Gov. Nice took over the reins of office from one of the most competent public administrators that Maryland has ever produced. Added to this handicap is the hostility of a Legislature which remains predominantly Democratic in spite of Mr. Nice's Republican victory.

The recent legislative session at Annapolis closed with almost nothing to its credit except the enactment of a gross sales tax of dubious serviceability. In these circumstances one would hardly expect to find Mr. Nice in the vanguard of those who venture forth to rescue the Nation from the New Dealers.

Yet current reports indicate that the Governor is to become the spearhead of a Republican "convention" in Baltimore, with the object of kindling partisan enthusiasm in that group of Eastern seaboard States from New York to the District of Columbia. Republican organizers are said to feel that Mr. Nice's election over Gov. Ritchie is the one bright spot in the 1934 election in this area. They are determined to take advantage of it. And Harry Nice appears willing to step out of his gubernatorial swaddling clothes to take the cue.

The eagerness of the Republicans of this area to capitalize on Mr. Nice can be easily understood. But Marylanders may also be pardoned if they visualize their new Governor in the role of a somewhat undeveloped David, going forth to conquest before he has learned how to handle his sling.

Art In The Market Place.

The idea that art has a wide popular appeal and therefore real commercial value will be put to the test in Washington during the month beginning Monday, when nine of our leading department stores simultaneously open the first Greater Washington Independent Art Exhibition. The sponsoring board of directors has been working with a three-fold purpose. They aim to put art within financial reach of the man in the street, to extend its satisfying and stimulating lure to those who have not yet learned to frequent either dealers or galleries and to lend a helping hand to the artist who is worthy of support.

Prior to the industrial revolution the plastic artist was an integral part of the social structure and as such felt an assurance and a security that rested partly on a mental and partly on an economic basis. During the nineteenth century the artist's struggle for existence became more acute, as art became an ornamental rather than a fundamental aspect of social life. Throughout the depression the straits in which innumerable artists find themselves have emphasized the fact that the artist no longer is in touch with an organized market nor with a public whose reactions might give him the inspiration and the stimulus so necessary to the creative worker. An essential purpose of the local undertaking is to find that market in a natural manner and on a basis that it is hoped may become permanent.

The artist is not to be the sole benefactor of this exhibition, soon to be placed in the Washington stores. The public also, and especially that portion with moderate incomes, will at last have a chance to buy original paintings and etchings of quality at reasonable prices.

This project is in a way a sequel to recent PWAP and CWA efforts to help artists carry on in spite of the depression. But where these governmental subsidies were primarily for the benefit of the artist, the present program seeks to develop public appreciation and mercantile interest, as well as to forward creative instinct. To do this, artist, merchant and average citizen must be brought into cooperation. Through this exhibition the first two will do their part. It will then be up to the residents of Washington to demonstrate that their love of art is sufficiently keen to tempt them not only to visit the exhibitions but to acquire for permanent enjoyment whatever pleases them most. Only if the public buys freely at these exhibitions, will the managements in the big shops learn to look upon art as desirable merchandise.

A Breath Of Spring.

Last summer there was an onion workers' strike in New Jersey. Now the Southwest experiences a demonstration of similar kind. It is a satisfaction to learn that the latter will not reach the serious proportions of its predecessor. But, as this new disorder early called out Texas Rangers, it should certainly summon all good gourmets to the defense of the too commonly maligned Allium cepa.

The anti-onion prejudice has little that is impressive to its credit. Shakespeare, indeed, warned: "Eat no onion nor garlic, for we are to utter sweet breath." Yet Shakespeare is one of the few poets to discredit this liliaceous bulb.

Both the Brownings—not alone lusty Robert, but also his delicate Elizabeth Barrett—supped on ale and onion-sandwiches. The national emblem of Wales—the Wales of brave Llewellyn and doughty Lloyd George—is the closely related leek. The onion rivals the lily as an economic foundation for the coral-built "vexed Bermoothes," and a more virile onion of Egypt has been one of the glories of the Nile since ever Cleopatra served it to Antony.

An intrusion in the Martini an onion may be. But no man or woman can successfully pretend to love good food who does not love good salads. And a salad without an onion (not to mention a touch of garlic) is a contradiction in gastronomic terms. Moreover, as for Shakespeare's "sweet breath," none will note its absence when everybody eats onions who ought to!

It seems a pity that succeeding generations will have to pay for the good times we're not having.

He's A Pilgrim And A Stranger.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

James A. Moffett's restiveness as Federal Housing Administrator has long been noticeable. That he has asked President Roosevelt to relieve him after his useful service is, perhaps, only a natural reaction for a business man who finds himself an alien adventurer in the Roosevelt Administration's Never-Never-Land.

With Secretary Ickes the chief of large housing projects and Relief Administrator Hopkins the promulgator of divers other housing experiments, it must be difficult for the Federal Housing Administrator to know what housing is his and what is Tugwell's. It is not to be wondered at that Mr. Moffett's experience with New Deal housing brings an unconquerable longing for the peace and sanity of home.

"This Way, Jumbo!"

During the temporary absence of Mr. Elderman, The Post's cartoonist, a symposium of editorial reaction to current national and foreign affairs will be published from day to day in this space. The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. The editors of The Post wish to make full acknowledgment of the courtesy of their contemporaries in granting permission for this procedure.

Capitol Architecture.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Any opinion of Dr. Leicester B. Holland relating to public buildings in Washington must command universal attention and respect. For that reason, I venture to point out an error in his statement in opposition to the enlargement of the Capitol.

For sentimental, historical and esthetic reasons, Dr. Holland wishes to preserve the exterior of the building intact, on the assumption that it exhibits the work of Thornton, Latrobe and Bullfinch. With that feeling, if it were founded on fact, no one could quarrel. But it is difficult to see how Dr. Holland has come to the conclusion that the exterior of the Capitol illustrates the genius of those architects. Their work simply is not there.

It is true that parts of the stones, mortar and paint (especially paint) specified by those designers are in place. But when additions and alterations are made on such a scale as to put the work of the original architects out of countenance, the earlier work has been, not indeed destroyed by the later, but defaced by it. Detraction is worse than destruction. The work of the designers does not look as they intended it to. The addition of the dome and wings has put the central building quite out of composition. What we have is not the work of Thornton, Latrobe and Bullfinch, but an unhappy parody or comic valentine which represents them in a false light and reflects dishonor upon the gods. Let us "pay the rev'rence of old days" to these vestigial reminders of the glory that was Greece, and entomb them in the urns and sepulchers of mortality.

Luckily, we have in the interior of the building several examples of the talents of these fathers which it is not proposed to touch. There remain Thornton's plan, Latrobe's lanterns, Bullfinch's rotunda. We have also in other parts of Washington complete and unified memorials to two of these men; the Octagon by Thornton, St. John's Church and the navy yard gate house by Latrobe. If we have no longer anything by Bullfinch since the regrettable razing of the old Unitarian police court, where John Quincy Adams prayed and Judge Snell was used to terrify the misdemeanants of our pastoral age, let us take heart in the knowledge that Bullfinch's Statehouse remains the hub of the solar system and that you couldn't pry that out of a Boston man if you had the tire of all creation straightened out for a crowbar.

Pan-American Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I want to take an early opportunity to express to you the deep appreciation of the Pan-American Union for the admirable Pan-American supplement which added so much to the significance of the celebration of Pan-American Day.

We Trust Not.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

If, as the paragraph in The Post of April 13 says, "Two youths were arrested in San Francisco for giving out antiwar handbills," we naturally deduce that anyone distributing prowar propaganda would be liable for some Government recognition or reward in the form of, say, a small medal, or, possibly, a cigar.

Gloomy Alternatives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Teddy DeNolasco certainly hit the nail on the head with his recent article anent the independence of the Philippines.

What will become of Philippine trade when the islands, at last an independent republic, face the prohibitory tariff walls of the United States? How will the Filipinos protect themselves in the midst of the volcanic Orient? They will have thrust upon them the necessity of maintaining a burdensome military and naval force of their own, or else be thankful for the protection of a strong and friendly nation.

Of what advantage will independence be to the Filipinos? Only one advantage, as I see it—henceforth they will be able to boast: "We are independent!"

A high-sounding phrase has often silenced the voice of reason.

"PLEBIAN."

Incongruous Design.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The Democritic emblem of atheism, and no emblem of democracy, has been made the support for the American flag at the United States Supreme Court Building. Upon the base upholding each flagstaff are the symbols of fire, water, earth and air. These represent the ideas of Democritus, the ancient Greek "laughing philosopher," who postulated that these elements comprised the whole universe and so denied the existence of a god or gods.

Democritus was the founder of the science of physics, a materialist, and an opponent of idealism whose thought has profoundly influenced those who have denied the legitimacy of religion. Those arguing from his philosophy would make God or the gods junior to Man, and Man, so, senior to religion, this being held by the "Democritans" to be an insubstantial structure erected upon a foundation of fears and phantasms.

The atheistic significance of the symbols probably did not occur to either the artist who conceived or the justices who approved the ornamental design, and this probably is the first instance in the history of the republic where the national colors will have been committed to the support of a symbolical denial of God.

The flag has not actually been upraised above the incongruous emblem, as the building is only now being prepared for occupancy by the Supreme Court.

A Father's Praise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As the father of two boys, I want to express my pleasure over the recent innovation in The Post, which seems so effectively to take the place of the comics—and to have a more permanent value. I refer, of course, to your Parade of Youth.

Instead of being tossed aside as the comics are after the first half hour of a Sunday morning, the Parade of Youth seems to linger about the house most of the week.

Blase Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I came to your lovely city to attend the D. A. R. Congress, but nearly landed in jail instead. On second thought, I feared the jail might be full, too, so decided against it. Before coming to Washington I wrote three different hotels and immediately on arrival at the bus terminal here, phoned five more only to be told there were no accommodations. My suitcase was heavy and the taxi fare seemed light, so I rode in state to still another only to have the same answer.

I paid the driver a quarter and began to walk on, but he offered to try the "Y," so I climbed back in. Before he had shifted to high gear, I saw a likely-looking place and asked him to let me out. He stuck out a dirty hand for another quarter. After going without lunch (for reasons of economy) I begrudged this much for riding a few yards—and he added 10 cents for keeping him. I took his name and went right to the taxi company. The manager upheld this daylight robbery. So now I am walking and trolleying, whereas I would have ridden many, many times during my week's stay and the injustice of it will rankle a long time. It will take a lot of pleasant happenings to wipe out that first bad impression.

All through Florida we have 10-cent taxis and in my ten years' residence there they have never overcharged me. We try also to make visitors feel satisfied and to right any wrong if it is possible, but I suppose Washington has so many thousands of outsiders that she has become blase.

Washington and Munich, Bavaria, are more alike than any two cities I know of, but you ought to see how Munich "jumps through hoops" for visitors. No gypping of tourists permitted there.

Relief To Red Cross?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

May I ask a question? Why is it that "relief" in the various States in this country is not placed in the hands of the American Red Cross?

Surely they must be equipped to handle it more efficiently and more smoothly than any other agencies.

Keep The Mint Bed.

It is saddening to be reminded by a Washington dispatch that the White House's once famous mint bed was destroyed by the steam shovels of PWA Project No. 1, modernization of the Executive Offices. This particular patch of mint went back a generation to the days of the first Roosevelt and South Carolina's "Pitchfork Ben" Tillman, who presented a basketful of mint plants to T. R. while a throng of spectators looked on. There is nothing symbolic, we trust, in what has happened on the White House grounds. The mint bed should remain an American institution.

This is the very time when the first dark green shoots of mint should be breaking through the soil along the garden fence near the starting hollyhocks. Perhaps the gardeners of today need to be told that mint plants come up each year, that they care for themselves, that they stand cool and fresh on the hottest midsummer day, ever ready to yield leaves for the relief of a disconsolate palate. Long live the backyard mint bed! It is as American as cherry pie.

The Post Impressionist

Lossiemouth To Stresa.

Post Office, Saturday.

TWO slim volumes, bound in a red not vivid, stood on the shelf nearest our desk: "Socialism and Society." "Socialism and Government." They were autographed—though not to us; to a mutual friend—in the clear, bold hand of their author:

"Compliments of J. Ramsay MacDonald."

Through them we first made his acquaintance.

* * *

That was in 1913. MacDonald had completed the first stage of his career. And he was a Figure.

Personally, he was the most considerate of men, and the most thoughtful. Perhaps rather fond of publicity, but deserving it—uncommonly careful of the reporters, but commanding their praise by a simplicity almost as great as his sincerity.

* * *

This was in 1935: last Tuesday. He had completed the fourth stage of his career.

* * *

That night-train was crowded. Among the crowd were a score of correspondents kept foodless since morning.

"There was one dining-car," says a dispatch to the New York Times, "and all the newspapermen hastened to book seats in it for the dinner set for 8:30. But at that hour admittance was refused: the entire car had been reserved for Mr. MacDonald.

"Through the glass-door he could be seen dining at ease with three companions. A few bolder spirits succeeded in breaking through. But an aid of Mr. MacDonald begged them to withdraw... Someone was smoking a pipe which the Premier found objectionable."

* * *

Ramsay MacDonald went a long way to reach Stresa.

He was born at the fishing village of Lossiemouth, on Scotland's Moray Firth, the son of laboring-folk, their home "a but and a ben." Nobody could have made a better start. Mostly, he educated himself, while working for twelve-and-six a week. He was a self-made man and, to all appearances, had a splendid job.

He was even, for a while, a newspaperman.

Early, he turned socialist, joined white-clad Keir Hardie's optimists in '94, conquered the apathy of the trades-unions toward political activity, created (his admirers said) the Labor Party, though upon how much he owed to "Uncle Arthur" Henderson the latter has maintained silence through modesty while MacDonald — has maintained silence. Stage I.

* * *

Stage II—the World War. He opposed Grey's theory about Britain's "obligation of honor," refused to alter his opinions in return for office when plenty of his nearest collaborators faltered. Ostracized politically, he was personally respected for that "simple sincerity."

* * *

Stage III started as a comeback: the Labor government, MacDonald at its head with a liberal foreign policy of "confidence and hope," and a restoration of Britain's prestige. But the Labor government didn't continue in power—whereas MacDonald did. This time it was Henderson who stuck. MacDonald headed—nominally—a (nominally) coalition government.

* * *

The rest is Stage IV.

Something happened to MacDonald. To the Post-Impressionist—who believes in the beneficial effect of Downing street on many premiers—it has long seemed that what happened to MacDonald was nevertheless Downing street. Some men there are for whom its atmosphere is too rarefied.

* * *

Don't suppose we are scolding Mr. MacDonald because he let those newspapermen go hungry for so long. Concerning a similar offense against our own person we could scold a far better man and a far better politician.

And don't suppose we are berating Mr. MacDonald along any line of "Just for a ribbon to stick in his coat." It was his coat—to turn if he chose: personally, we never shared either of his uniforms.

The coalition incident and the dining-car insult are merely symbols.

* * *

But they are significant symbols, at that. They are "an outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual"—fall from grace.

While yet he was at Stresa, Mr. MacDonald complacently expressed the certitude: "I am sure America is praying for me." We fervently agree with Tennyson that more things are wrought by prayer than this world wots of; yet (to end a sentence with a preposition in the laureate's manner) we are inclined to fear that a good many Americans impiously consider Mr. MacDonald past praying for.

Russian Foreign Policy Hits German Fascism

Moscow Urges Pacts To Insure Peaceful Readjustment When Hitler Program Collapses.

The following article is comprised of excerpts translated from Izvestia of March 23. The author is assistant editor of Pravda, and is regarded as one of the most authoritative Soviet commentators on foreign policies and affairs.

By Karl Radek.

THE struggle for armaments represents for Germany a stage already passed. Germany still needs a certain amount of time to perfect her new military machine, to accumulate the new military supplies necessary to train her army; but she has already entered upon the second period, the period of struggling for the direct aims of German foreign policy. Its spearpoint is directed both against the peoples which German imperialism wishes to subjugate and against the imperialist competitors of Germany. The attempt of the Berlin political leaders to assure France that Germany does not intend to touch her, that France must only refrain from preventing Germany from carrying out her aims in the east, naturally convinces nobody. It is not only that the National-Socialists could not relinquish Alsace-Lorraine, but that in carrying out their program Germany would become the dominant force in Europe and there would then be no obstacle to wresting the colonies from the old imperialist powers.

Thus all the rest of Europe is faced with the problem of finding a means of defense against the realization of the German program of foreign policy. In prewar-times this would have led immediately to the creation of a coalition of the powers against Germany. The European states would have opposed the German program of expansion with their own program of expansion. When England headed the anti-German coalition in the war of 1914-18, it fought not only to beat off the German attack, but for the dismemberment of Turkey, for the seizure of the German colonies, for the establishment of a route from Cape Town to Cairo and from Cairo to India. Czarism opposed the German program of expansion with its own program for the seizure of Posen, Galicia, Armenia and Constantinople. Now even England and France have no such program of expansion, since they are occupied with the problem of their own colonies. The fact that the Soviet Union strives for no conquests whatever needs no demonstration. This is the first distinguishing feature of the situation.

* * * *

AND NOT only that—the experience of the World War showed the victor nations the impossibility of dismembering Germany. The great German people represents in the national cultural sense a single whole, and the debacle of 1918 showed how illusory was the desire to dismember Germany. Even at the moment when German Fascism puts forward its program of dismembering the Soviet Union, it is not necessary to demonstrate that the Soviet Union opposes in principle the dismemberment of any nation whatsoever.

The second distinguishing feature of the situation consists in the fact that the policy of dismembering Germany on the part of the powers of the former Entente has become impossible and they are not interested at present in a new war.

The third striking feature of the situation is that, although Herr Hitler declares that Fascism will exist for a thousand years, even his admirers and friends in Poland give him a maximum of ten years in the semiofficial government organ Gazeta Polska, in the words of M. Smorozhevsky.

We have no intention of searching the tea leaves for the answer as to what will be the length of life of German Fascism. But one thing is clear. This regime is in no condition to solve a single one of the economic problems confronting Germany, even to the extent which British, American and French capitalists are still "solving" the questions confronting them. Fascist Germany has not sufficient reserves for this. The attempt of Entente capital to enslave completely the workers of Germany, whose labor is the foundation of the life of the entire country, is doomed to inevitable failure. Therefore there can be no question of making an attempt, as did the prewar coalition, to encircle Germany and administer if possible a swift and decisive blow.

* * * *

FINALLY, the fourth special characteristic of the present situation is the existence of such a bulwark of peace as the U. S. S. R. The U. S. S. R., as no other state, is interested in enduring and firm peace. While by no means a defender of Versailles, it is an ardent advocate of peace and an opponent of all attempts to plunge the people into the mire of a new world war. Precisely for this reason it is decisively against the adventurists schemes of German Fascism.

The problem, therefore, is to place the greatest possible obstacles in the way of any Fascist adventure. An agreement is necessary among all the nations threatened by German policy on joint defense against German aggression. For this reason the Soviet Union supports the idea of regional pacts which would guarantee assistance to their signatories in case of attack. In a pact of this nature Germany should take part. Thus the Soviet Union has demonstrated that it desires neither the encirclement of Germany nor war with Germany, but only the creation of a system guaranteeing to all participants, including Germany, protection against aggression. The refusal of Germany to take part in such a system, if it is final, will in no way change the purely defensive nature of the regional pact of mutual assistance, since that pact will remain open for Germany at any time she may desire to become a party to it. This will be the best guarantee of the defensive importance of the system of regional pacts.

The problem is to make those sections of the German people which support Fascism understand that the realization of the program of German Fascism is not as simple as they believe it to be. The problem is to provide Germany with an opportunity to become convinced of the unrealizability of the program of its leaders and, when she understands this, to give her the possibility of seeking a way out of her difficult situation through economic collaboration with other peoples, through peaceful cooperation, and not through war.

TO be sure, we are aware of all the difficulties which stand in the way of every improvement in the economic situation in capitalist countries, and it is not our problem to try to overcome pessimism regarding the fate of capitalism. But for the benefit of those of the German political leaders who, from a pessimistic appraisal of the situation of German capitalism, conclude that it is essential to seek a way out by means of war, we offer these thoughts on German armament, published in the Polish Conservative newspaper, Czas (of March 18). Analyzing the outlook of the race for armaments and war, this newspaper says:

> The people are weary, afraid of war; they desire peace. War can end only in revolution. To send this same generation—after years of poverty, unemployment, insecurity about tomorrow—once again to the trenches, to order them to kill and be killed, while at the same time their wives and children are poisoned by deadly gases; to hold at the same time the hope that the soldiers will peacefully return home, and will again endure poverty and unemployment—is that not indeed an illusion?

Czas belongs to the government camp in Poland. It would be well if some thinking were done in Berlin about the sentiments here expressed. It is stupid to commit suicide for fear of sickness.

Loudoun Citizens To Fight Tax Boost

Budget Will Be Adopted at Meeting Monday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., April 19.—Large numbers of taxpayers are expected to attend the meeting of the Loudoun County board of supervisors here Monday to protest against the proposed increase in the tax levy. The budget will be adopted for the fiscal year, beginning July 1, and the rate set at this meeting.

At the last meeting of the board in March, the supervisors adopted a tentative levy of $1 on $100 assessed valuation, an increase of 20 cents over last year's rate. This tentative rate was set to meet the increased appropriation for schools. Last year the appropriation was $82,500. The school board claims they are unable to function efficiently with this amount, and they asked for $112,000. The supervisors set the appropriation tentatively at $100,000.

State Acts to Revoke Drunk Drivers' Permits

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 19.—First hearings under a new West Virginia law permitting revocation of licenses of persons found guilty of driving automobiles while intoxicated were held here yesterday, by James P. Tierney, supervisor of transportation for State Road Commission, following similar previous sittings in Clarksburg. Ten cases were called for review. Only two reported in person, the others by affidavits.

Hugh Allen, of Sheperdstown, based his opposition to forfeiture of his license partly on the ground that he was fined on Sunday which, he contended, was illegal. The motion for dismissal of the case was denied.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

To The Veterans.

MY Friends (to steal Mr. Roosevelt's thunder): The battle for the bonus is won. We have them on the run. If there was ever a time when we veterans should stick together it is now. Compromise? Why, the very suggestion is ridiculous. Instead of accepting it we should redouble our efforts not for the cash payment alone but for payment in old gold dollars or their equivalent. We want no 59-cent dollars, fellow veterans. We demand $1.69.

BARGERON.

The truth is, my friends, that a lot of us are just beginning to take interest in the fight. It had been a more or less academic discussion to us until they suggested compromise. When they say that, boys, compromise is about the last thing in the world we should do. We've got them on the run. Let's see how far we can make them go.

* * * *

In these days when everybody either has or wants to get his hands in the trough it is up to us to show what a real raid on the Treasury can be. Let's show the New England textile operatives, the Southern cotton planters, the farmers as a whole, let's show the tariff subsidized interests how to conduct a major raid. Let's show the mayors of our cities who lobby here for so-called public works funds, let's show all of them how it is done.

They think they have good lobbies. Why, we've got the best one in the world. Compromise? Hah, what we demand is payment at $1.69. If the gentlemen on the hill cry real pitifully maybe we will compromise at $1.68. But no such compromise as is proposed, my friends. Let's make the boys squirm.

That will be the real fun. It isn't a question of the money at all. But think of the mental anguish we can give the boys on the Hill. We know we are causing genuine suffering, my friends, when they begin to weaken. All we've got to do now is to sit pretty and let them come all the way.

* * * *

Now mark my word, my friends, if we accept the compromise they will be bragging in the campaigns next year about how cheaply they got rid of us. Rid of us we must never permit them to be. Even if we accept full cash payment with 59-cent dollars they will seek to turn this to their account and before they get through with the telling of it they will tell how the Republicans incurred a debt and they paid it off at slightly more than half. No, sir, it's $1.69 dollars we demand. It would be unfair to our Republican benefactors to settle for less. It's not the money, my friends. It's the principle of the thing.

It is not for us to worry about an unbearable debt. We should not listen to the arguments of what payment of the bonus will do to the country. We know perfectly well that the Senators and members of the House would do nothing injurious. They are too high-minded and patriotic for that. If they think payment of the bonus will hurt the country they have only to vote against it, my friends. There is no force on earth that can make them change.

But if they are willing to sell the country out to bring about their reelection, then they need not be talking patriotism to us. We can show them and all those who want money from the Federal Government how really to play the game. We've got the strength.

* * * *

Ah, my friends, this matter goes to the ground roots of things or something. Well, you can imagine the gentlemen on the Hill screaming that we are about to wreck the country, and it is they who must pass the bonus, not us. We only demand, and while some of them may lose their jobs if they don't vote for us, they surely wouldn't let a little matter like that cause them to vote for a bill that will wreck the country.

They have frequently hailed citizens before committees and questioned their ethics and their motives. Following some of these committees for several years, one gets the impression that the motives and ethics of our citizens are what they are mostly interested in. Well, let's find out about them.

Let's see how far they will really go to hold a $10,000 a year job.

French Capital Has Its Sparrows And Gulls But Is Spared Starling Problem.

By Andre Vulliet,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

SO far as the bird situation is concerned, Paris is by no means confronted with such a vital problem as Washington. Well behaved and affectionate, all its birds are of the familiar type. No starlings, they.

Most widespread, of course, among Paris winged inhabitants are the tiny, ever-skipping sparrows. You can count them by the million, although, since the gradual disappearance of horse transportation, many of them must have migrated toward more nourishing climes.

Nevertheless, the Paris population seems to have a pet affection for its countless sparrows, whose alertness has often been compared to that of its mischievous gutter snipes. So much so, that the expression "Paris sparrow" has been coined to mean not the bird but a Paris "kid."

Feeding the birdies seems to be one of the most absorbing occupations of Paris pension holders, retired government employes, kind-hearted ladies and "concierges." Indeed the picture of such persons tossing up crumbs in the air, surrounded by crowds of greedy sparrows, is a frequent one in all Paris public gardens.

This familiar scene is also a regular one in the courtyard of the Louvre Palace, which, being trafficless, at times vividly recalls the Piazza San Marco in Venice, with its thousands and thousands of pigeons eating out of the hands of their devoted feeders.

Much less domestic but quite as familiar in the Paris bird family are sea gulls, often seen along the Seine River during the cold winter days, and swallows, whose swift darts in the warm twilights are taken by old timers as a sure sign of fine or rainy weather according to whether they fly high or low.

And I suppose these pretty birds must visit France much earlier than England or the United States as the French contend that "one sparrow does not make a spring," while the English proverb speaks of a summer only.

And last in this list, but by no means the least, are companies of crows which have chosen for their pet domiciles the huge platans along the Seine banks. Seen from a distance, their black swarms in the trees make a real startling effect. But they are not such a nuisance. At present, most of them are busy making their nests in the upper branches, and their fussing about is watched with attention and sympathy by scores of Parisians who just love to browse about.

* * * *

SUCH versatility as Louis Barthou's, the late French foreign minister, who was murdered at Marseilles with King Alexander of Yugoslavia, is a rare gift from the gods.

A politician, a lawyer, a member of 16 French cabinets, a writer, an art lover, a brilliant conversationalist, a member of the French Academy, an admirer of beauty in all its forms, he was, above all, a bibliophile. The recent sale of his books went far to prove that he was a good one. It netted more than $200,000 which, incidentally, shows that rare art pieces have weathered the storm of depression better than gilt-edged stocks.

A copy of the Versailles Treaty, in French and English, bearing the autograph signatures of Poincare, Joffre, Clemenceau, Foch, Petain and Lloyd George, was bought by an anonymous American for 41,500 francs, nearly $3,000. A collector paid 50,000 francs for a packet of letters, written by Napoleon to Josephine, in a binding bearing the emperor's coat of arms; "Les Fleurs du Mal," by Beaudelaire, with a dedication by the author, went up as high as $4,000.

* * * *

NO atmosphere could be tenser and hotter and yet more passionately interesting than that prevailing at the Hotel Drouot, where Barthou's library was disposed of.

For nearly a century, it has been the auction sales house of Paris, where the earthly belongings of rich collectors or poor workers alike have passed into new hands. The crowd, there, is most fascinating, including as it does refined "connaisseurs" or slummy second-hand dealers, according to whether a priceless Rembrandt or a pile of junk is on sale.

If you know how to wait for an opportunity, you can furnish your new apartment for a mere song. At least as regards the old stove situation, this department knows by personal experience that the buyer's position is a privileged one.

Disposing, among other things, of an old stove the bids for which stuck at 10 cents, this department, feeling that, if only for its ornamental value, it was worth much more than that, bought it back for 13 cents. No doubt, it would find a "real" buyer in a future sale. The next sale arrived, but no better offer. The stove had to go for a mere 7 cents.

Easter Observance

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

ALTHOUGH the percentage of church members was higher in our population in New England and Virginia 300 years ago than it is today, Easter has far more recognition now than then. The Puritans did not care much for Lent, Good Friday, and Easter; they refused to celebrate these special occasions, for the same reason that they disliked ritualistic services and elaborate vestments.

Today it is quite otherwise. Our Italian friends, who constitute so large a proportion of American citizens, naturally regard Easter as the climax of the whole religious year; and indeed nearly all Protestant churches and all religiously-minded people, unite in the observance of Easter in a way that would have filled our New England ancestors with amazement.

* * * *

For my part, I rejoice in all this. Easter is a day of universal delight, happiness, elevation. The American philosopher, Paul Elmer More, says that the supreme gift of the Christian religion to humanity is not Love, but Hope.

". . . History would seem to teach that, if there is any hope for these present days of black despondency it is to be sought not in the exploded idea of mechanical progress but in the waiting hope of faith."

Easter is the joyous celebration of the greatest hope ever offered to suffering men and women.

* * * *

Whenever we think of Easter, we think of light—and as the sacramental color for Good Friday is black, so the color for Easter all over the world is white.

"Loveliest of tree, the cherry now
Is hung with bloom along the bough,
And stands about the woodland ride

Others Expected to Enter As County Is Admitted to Post's Area.

King George County has been added to those taking part in the national spelling bee in the area in which it is being sponsored by The Washington Post. Two schools in this county enrolled immediately, King George Grade and Elementary School, of which David L. Villions is principal, and Madison School, Miss Nellie W. Ashton, principal. Others are expected to enter shortly.

Plans are under way to combine King George and Stafford counties, of which T. Benton Gayle is division superintendent, for convenience in holding their matches. They will take place the same day, but the two bees will be run off separately so that each county can receive the two prizes offered and send its two best spellers to the area finals. Arrangements for an auditorium, convenient to people in both counties, are being made.

St. Marys Judges Named.

Three educators from St. Marys County have consented to serve as judges at the match in Margaret Brent High School, Helen, Md., Saturday, May 4, at 7:30 p. m. They are T. F. Johnson, principal of the high school; Miss M. Adele France, principal, St. Marys Seminary, St. Marys City, and J. F. Coad, of Charlotte Hall School, who also is director of Camp Cherryfields at Drayden.

J. Thomas Walker, principal of Gordonsville High School, yesterday announced his four best spellers as follows: William Willis, Katherine Lovering, Marion Cowherd and Howard Meade. These school champions will advance to the Orange County match, which is being arranged now. Large schools in this county will have four spellers and small schools two in the county match.

In St. Marys County, Miss Virginia V. Mitchell has announced Benjamin Wood and Louise Bohle as the champion spellers of Oraville School.

Schools which enrolled yesterday, with the name of the principal or teacher in charge, are:

Fauquier County—The Plains, J. Thomas Helm, jr., principal.

Warren County——Water Lick, Miss Alice McDonald.

Spotsylvania County—Enon School, Miss Gladys Staples.

Loudoun County—Sterling School, Miss Bessie Grubb.

Stafford County—White Oak School, Mrs. Gladys Strickler.

Frederick County—Brook Kill, Ralph Burgee.

St. Mary's County—Clements School, Miss Mary Layman Norris.

This brings the schools enrolled to 223, and entries in each county will remain open until a few days before the county match. Enrollments and inquiries should be addressed to Alice Fox Pitts, Spelling Bee Director, The Washington Post.

Brookings NRA Report Offers Idea To G. O. P.

Politics Might Well Try Elementary Economics In Drafting A Platform.

By Elliott Thurston.

ALTHOUGH William Allen White too modestly refuses to write a Republican platform—even at $1,000 a word, which would be cheap enough—the G. O. P. need not despair. Ogden Mills could do it, preferably under an assumed name. The Brookings Institution could do it. Almost any normal economist could do it. By a normal economist is meant one who keeps calm and collected—who does not have emotional or Messiah complexes. Even Mr. Hoover's admirers would hesitate to boast that he could write it because he never had the flair for the written or spoken word.

Incidentally, William Allen White reports that Mr. Hoover's curve may be rising. With his accustomed candor the Emporia editor notes that if Mr. Hoover's curve deviates at all its line must be upward. He means, of course, a charted curve of popularity. Even so, Mr. Hoover is not the man to write the platform—except, perhaps, the home fires sections which he has done often and well.

* * * *

HOWEVER, this continues to be, unhappily, a day of consciousness of economics. No very great numbers of the people have become sufficiently indoctrinated as yet to be able to tell a fact from a fallacy. Otherwise, in all probability, there would have been more signs of public uprising long since. Nevertheless the thought seems to be creeping into more and more minds that plenty can not be achieved by destroying it. The idea appears to be spreading around rather widely that the abundant life can not be reached by restricting the abundance. And more and more people, lacking the handicaps or benefits of academic knowledge of the mysteries of money, possess the common sense to understand that money is only worth what it will buy.

Thus the worker who gets more pay but can buy no more with it because prices have risen as fast or faster than wages begins to perceive that he is no better off. The same goes for the farmer and, for that matter, for everybody else. Even the Townsendites have belatedly comprehended the simple but illusive truth that lining the pockets of elderly pensioners with money accomplishes nothing, except ruin, unless the money is worth real wealth. Huey Long is bright enough to see that wealth has to be created before it can be distributed—that distributing mere symbols of wealth, in other words, money, is foolish unless the symbols represent something, namely, real wealth—goods, things.

* * * *

THANKS to the Brookings Institution, which is an independent, non-political endowment devoted to the ascertainment of fact and exposing of fallacies, this same, simple truth has once more been stated, this time with reference to the NRA. Said the institution's report on the effects of NRA:

"In trying to raise the real purchasing power of the Nation by boosting costs and prices, the NRA put the cart before the horse. Raising the prices either of labor or goods is not the way to get a larger volume purchased.

The higher wages and costs, the report emphasized, had in fact actually "tended to diminish the physical volume of production."

Further, the report said:

"The NRA has done much to propagate the fallacy that raising wage rates is in itself a good thing." At another place it said: "The so-called high-wage doctrine, held universally by organized labor and widely by industry itself, fails to distinguish between money wages and real wages."

That is the nub of the whole thing. It is so elementary that the academic economists hesitate to repeat it. Yet somebody ought to repeat it, over and over, until labor, the farmers, all the redistributors of wealth, even politicians, begin to grasp the idea.

* * * *

THERE is nothing to stop the Republicans from seizing upon the idea. Heaven knows they need one. There is no patent on this one. If there ever was it lapsed thousands of years ago. Mr. Mills has recurred to it time and again, as in his Thursday night speech at Brunswick, Me., and, one may suspect, in Mr. Hoover's last blast at the New Deal.

For political purposes the idea is ideal, because Republicans of all schools, Tories, Progressives, Radicals, what-not, could unite on it. Not a few Democrats would join them. Moreover, it is the chief key to the major dilemmas of the New Deal—it affords the sharpest possible contrast to what has been done in the NRA, the AAA, in monetary manipulation and all the rest of the rush for a price level or a wage level, at the expense of producing real wealth.

* * * *

OF COURSE, many New Dealers are fully conscious of all this. Primarily, Mr. Richberg is trying to free the NRA from the price-fixing, production-limiting features. Henry Wallace's printed and spoken anxieties reflect his dismay on the same score so far as the AAA is concerned. Gov. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, sees that creating real wealth not mere money is the major problem. Those who would like a rest from any more reforms and reformers, lest they hog-tie all real productivity are motivated by the same basic idea.

It's a good idea—very ancient. It needs to be taken by the politicians. The Republicans ought to grab it before it is too late. With that idea as a starter, writing the rest of the platform would be easy. It might even prove highly popular, depending on how much the country has learned, how many will read such elementary reports as the current one from the independent, non-political Brookings Institution. Economics and politics may even yet meet.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

Imaginary Interviews. (Babe Ruth)

Q. Well, Babe, how does it seem to be off the Yankee team?

A. I think you'd get a better idea by asking the Yankees.

Q. How did you feel going to bat for the first time in Boston?

A. I was so nervous I thought the pitcher would have a breakdown.

Q. When you trotted out there onto a baseball field a couple of hundred miles from Broadway, what were your thoughts?

A. I remember thinking about a book I once read.

Q. What was the book?

A. "The Count of Monte Cristo."

Q. What made you think of that, Babe?

A. Well, there was a guy in that story, too, who was stitched up in an old bag, and thrown overboard, but he cut his way out and did better than ever.

Q. It was written by Alexander Dumas, wasn't it?

A. I don't know who wrote it but I know a man who never read it.

Q. Who was that?

A. Jake Ruppert.

* * * *

Q. On the level, Babe, how are you physically?

A. If I'm twice as decrepit as the Yankees thought, I will still be three or four times better than the Braves had hoped.

Q. Are your legs all right?

A. I'm satisfied. After all, I'm with a baseball club, not a burlesque show.

Q. Didn't you state last year that it was your last season as a player?

A. Yes, but we all make mistakes. Didn't Hoover say prosperity was just around the corner?

Q. How many home runs do you expect to hit?

A. Fifty for the Braves and 100 for the Yankees.

Q. How can you play with the Braves and make 100 home runs for the Yanks?

A. Every home run I hit for the Braves will seem like two to Col. Ruppert.

* * * *

Q. Writers have said that you were a darling of the gods, that things always break for you in the big moment. What do you think?

A. That would be a swell theory if you could get the pitchers to believe it.

Q. How does it seem, Mr. Ruth, to be in a different league?

A. Oh, the photographers look strange, but so far the fences and the pitchers look about the same.

* * * *

Q. Well, good luck, Babe. It's curious how many people thought you were all washed up as a great baseball star.

A. Oh, up here in Massachusetts that doesn't seem strange at all. More than 160 years ago they threw over what they thought was tea up here and it turned out to be dynamite.

That's Sumpin.

Complain not of the cold, my lad—
Heave not at Spring that brick!
For this alone you should be glad:
You're not an Easter chick!

Elmer Twitchell thinks Col. Ruppert turned in the Babe too soon and made a big mistake in not holding out for at least a $25 allowance in a trade.

An Easter Lesson

By the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, Minister, Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

So often we take it for granted that a declaration of eternal life should be received with joy and rapture. But can we not imagine some people hearing that news with a shudder of horror and others considering it as an absurdity, with the kind of lives they possess?

Let us suppose we should say to a man like the gangster Dillinger, "Rejoice, you are going to live forever!" What kind of a place is it that we would want to put a man like that in forever?

But, on the other hand, let us suppose we should say to a woman like Jane Addams, "Rejoice, you are going to live forever!" Immediately we recognize that not only with joy, but also with the reality that Jane Addams is not interested in an endless extension of days as much as how that time could be utilized for useful and worth while effort.

Through a consideration of these two lives we are confronted with the recognition that any form of life after death has little meaning for us if it is simply an eternal extension of time. If immortality is merely the opportunity to live eternally as we are living now, how many people would want it? That is probably where the monstrous idea of a God who sent people to hell originated. If everyone went on living eternally there had to be some place to put those for whom such life is meaningless, and so a hell was invented.

We have now discovered that, whoever God is, He is not One who condemns us to eternal useless living, either in a heaven or a hell. The God of our highest spiritual insight is One who is interested in the creative process, physically, mentally and spiritually, and no one can connect a God like that with static existence.

We now know that we can not prove that there is, or is not, a personal life after death, nor can we describe it in any way. As we know that the physical body disappears, the only meaning that a survival can have is in relation to man's appreciation of those forms of life that have no relation to time. It is not that we have lived, but what we have lived for, which makes future opportunity of any significance.

The noblest men and women of the ages have always believed that the God in which we finally trust cares about the future of such lives. They have always looked at the future as Jesus did, and said, "Fear not."

'Atonement Doctrine' Christian Science Topic

"Doctrine of Atonement" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Church of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text is from Hebrews, 9:28: "Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Awake, awake; put on thy strength, O Zion; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, the holy city: for henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised and the unclean." (Isaiah, 52:1.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Divine Truth, Life, and Love gave Jesus authority over sin, sickness and death."

Easter Music to Be Heard

All Denominations Plan Special Programs Here Tomorrow.

Choir singers, organists and other church musicians will step out of the realm of incidental music tomorrow into more featured roles. For Washington's Easter observance will be one of music.

Stapletons Will Return Home Today

Many Old Friends Seen by Stellita During 2-Weeks Stay.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Four weeks ago Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and her daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton, left for Europe on 24 hours' notice to attend the first drawing room of the season in Buckingham Palace, at which Miss Stapleton made her bow to their Britannic majesties. It seems an incredibly short time for two ocean crossings, a court presentation and a gay two weeks in London society, and yet Miss Stapleton and her mother will return to their Massachusetts avenue home today.

Miss Stapleton, one of the most popular debutantes of the season, has a rare charm and enthusiasm for life, and an account of her trip and the presentation will be most interesting.

Guest of Honor at Parties.

A letter from Miss Stapleton which arrived in Washington one day before her return tells of some of the gay times she had and of some of the many interesting people she met. Mrs. Walter P. Anderson, wife of the United States naval attache in London, gave a tea for Miss Stapleton on one of the first days of her visit in London, and there she met numerous new as well as old friends. Mrs. Ray Atherton, wife of the counselor of our embassy and a sister of Mrs. Franklyn Mott Gunther, entertained for Miss Stapleton at a cocktail party. Among the guest were Mr. and Mrs. George Bostwick, who just returned from Europe a few days ago. Mr. Bostwick, better known to his friends as Pete, rode his own horse in the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree a few weeks ago.

Also there was young Mrs. Hiram Bingham, jr., a niece of Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis and a daughter-in-law of former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham. Young Mr. Bingham is attached to the United States Embassy in London.

Among others of interest to Washington whom Miss Stapleton saw on her visit are Miss Gladys Szechenyi, daughter of the Hungarian Minister to London and Countess Szechenyi, who was a debutante in Washington two winters ago when her father was accredited to this country. Miss Szechenyi visited here during the early winter, and since her return to Europe has been in Hungary where she visited her sister, Countess Bela Hadik, the former Miss Alice Szechenyi, at her country home near Budapest.

Week-Ends in Country.

Miss Christine Ekengren, daughter of Mrs. Wilhelm Ekengren and the late Minister of Sweden, was in London when Miss Stapleton was there, having sailed a few weeks ago to join her sister, Miss Elsie Ekengren, in Sweden, where the latter has been visiting relatives for some time. Miss Ekengren plans to remain abroad for several months.

And then there were week-ends in the country spent in the delightful English manner. On one occasion Miss Stapleton visited her godmother, Lady Mallet, at her home near Bath. Among others in the house party was Mrs. Philip du Cros, daughter of the hostess, whose father-in-law, Sir Philip du Cros, lent one of his homes to the King several years ago when his Majesty was ill.

One of the great delights of the trip was tea with Lady Isabella Howard, wife of the former British Ambassador to Washington, Sir Esme Howard, who is now Lord Howard. Lady Isabella has known Miss Stapleton since she was a little girl and her pleasure in seeing the charming young lady, who is the "little Stella" of not so many years ago, was scarcely less than the delight of Miss Stapleton in greeting one of Washington's most-loved hostesses.

"Sink or Swim" Instruction Methods Branded Barbarous by Olympic Star

Tossing Child In Water Held Cause of Fear

Confidence Is First Need of Swimmer, Martha Norelius Wright Says.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE IDEA that youngsters should be taught to swim by throwing them into the water as if they were puppies is nothing short of barbarous, in the opinion of Martha Norelius Wright, one of the greatest swimmers the world has ever produced.

"I've never known of any one who really learned to swim by that method," said 24-year-old sun-tanned Mrs. Wright recently as she watched her tow-headed little daughter scoot up and down the play apparatus in the children's recreation room at the Greenbrier, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

"Many a person's fear of the water," continued the one-time holder of 11 world records, "dates from the day he was tossed overboard and told to sink or swim. Usually he would have sunk if someone hadn't pulled him out. But the damage had already been done. He had been made afraid of water."

Daughter to Be Champion.

The best way to teach any one to swim is to build up his confidence even if it takes water wings to do it, Mrs. Wright is convinced. That was the way her father taught her to swim. And that's the way Mrs. Wright has taught her own daughter, 4-year-old Diane, to stroke her way through the water.

Some day Diane is going to be a champion swimmer. Her mother has set her heart on it. That is one reason the great Norelius, who starred in two Olympics and who formerly traveled all over the country winning additional glory through exhibitions, is content to live quietly at White Sulphur Springs. There she assists her father in managing the pool at the Greenbrier. There she has time to give a lot of attention to Diane, a roguish little sprite with sturdy legs and quick, shy smile.

The life of a big-time swimming champion is full of excitment, fun and interesting contacts, Mrs. Wright found when she was at the top of the heap. She wants her daughter to know the same sort of existence, to have similar experiences.

Holds Rawls Greatest.

The girl who builds herself into a champion swimmer, far from endangering her health as many persons believe, is headed toward physical perfection, Mrs. Wright is convinced. It annoys her when persons imply, as many do, that Gertrude Ederle's partial deafness is the result of swimming; that Sybil Bauer's death was caused by her devotion to the water.

"Gertrude was having trouble with her hearing before she ever swam the English channel, before she had ever done much swimming at all, in fact. And Sybil tried to do too much. She was up to her neck in all sorts of activities," said Mrs. Wright.

Katherine Rawls is probably the greatest woman swimmer today, the former Olympic star believes. She admitted she doesn't keep as well informed as she might on current happenings and personalities in the swimming world. She's too busy teaching would-be swimmers.

Woman Learns at 64.

One of her most interesting pupils is a woman 64 years old who suddenly decided to take to the water. She had to work harder than a young person to keep from drowning, but she finally mastered the strokes.

"Which proves," said Martha Norelius Wright, "a person is never too old to learn to swim. However, the ideal age to start is 5. I started Diana sooner because she's to be a champion. Aren't you Diane?"

The tow-headed youngster didn't seem much impressed with the prospect. She grinned at her mother and without bothering to answer the question, climbed on top a big wooden duck and began to rock violently back and forth, singing softly to herself.

When this picture was made of the famous swimmer, Martha Norelius Wright, and her 4-year-old daughter, Diane, Mrs. Wright said, "I feel so overdressed." Most of her appearances before the camera have been in a swim suit.

Baby Carriage Makers Report Trend to Twins

A trend to twins in the United States is indicated by reports of the Association of Baby Carriage Dealers. An extraordinary demand for twin perambulators has been noted in the last year and also a decrease in sales of ordinary baby carriages.

Radical Change In Silhouette Is Predicted

A RADICAL change of silhouette for women next fall is predicted by Miss Ruth E. Waltz, fashion economist of New York, who mantains that style predicting has been reduced to an exact science.

"Fashion is no longer based on shims and hunches," says Miss Waltz, "but follows definite paths and cycles and, contrary to popular belief, always gives advance warning of changes in line and color."

In a talk before the Forum of American Designers at Atlantic City, Mis. Waltz recently announced her fashion prophecies for next fall. She said:

"Our charts show that skirts will be fuller and noticeably shorter, although they will not go to the extremely short lengths of 1928.

Classic Design in Shoes.

"Necklines will come down from around our throats where they have been for the last few years. Sleeves will have their fullness below, rather than above, the elbow. Shoes will grow simpler, more classic in design, and hats will frame the face, rather than be a decided accent of their own.

"How do we know these things? Because our charts indicate them definitely. These charts are based on research work covering the past 30 years, and on them we base our predictions for future fashion trends. Six basic influences govern, either jointly or singly, practically every fashion.

These are:

Influences Enumerated.

"Historic: Such as war, which makes women adopt black as the best expression of the national temper.

"Economics: Such as a depression, which brings out our gayest colors in an effort to brighten the national landscape.

"Psychological: Closely related to the first two. During a period of prosperity, for example, the tendency is always toward light pastels, which are the most subtle—and expensive—of colors.

"Artistic: Influence of art movements on fashion.

"Social: Development of new types of clothes to fit social needs, such as the hostess gown, the cocktail dress and the bridge costume.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

IF APRIL 20 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m., and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m.

If April 20 is your birthday, you were born under the Zodiacal sign Taurus. You are courageous, and have plenty of confidence in your own ability, as well as a remarkable amount of perseverance. Good natured, as a rule, if angered you are apt to lose control of your temper. You may be inclined to worry entirely too much over imginary aches and pains, or trying to analyze your physical fitness.

You have many undeveloped talents, any one of which might gain you recognition if you took the time, as well as the trouble to bring it to the point where it could be successfully utilized. You are broad-minded in your views of religion. In financial matters you exercise excellent judgment. You appreciate and take advantage of cultural opportunities. The emerald and moss agate, are the birth stones for Taurians. The daisy, violet and goldenrod are the natal flowers.

If a woman and April 20 is your birthday, to gain affection, as well as universal esteem, it is important you develop a gentle, as well as sympathetic disposition. Do not try to control or regulate other people, or their affairs. You probably will either earn, inherit or marry into a great deal of money. Cashiering, bookkeeping, banking or acting as purchasing agent, are lines of activity for which you should be well fitted. In domestic life you will find possibly a great deal of freedom, as well as happiness, if you do not try to rule the household with too much severity.

If a man and April 20 is your natal day, your happiness, as well as future is likely to be adversely affected if you allow yourself to get into the habit of being a martinet in home or office, so it will be worth while to give this the proper amount of thought. Inventing, foundry work, engineering, acting, as well as writing, offer excellent money-making chances.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: What, in your estimation, is the analysis of this situation? Last summer a friend of mine visited me and I endeavored in every way, as did members of my family, to make her visit an enjoyable one. When I returned her visit she was equally pleasant to me.

• • • •

During my stay one young man in particular was very nice to me. Perhaps his courtesy was due to friendship for the girl's family, but nevertheless, he was outstandingly attentive. We corresponded for a short while and he later visited in my home. His attitude was still one of interest at this time and he spoke of coming again.

• • • •

Due to unforesen circumstances this girl was unable to visit me later, as we had arranged, and I, on invitation, went to her home instead. On this second visit I sensed a decided change in her attitude toward me. She seemed to be trying to impress me with her sophistication and did nothing for my entertainment at all. It was all very unpleasant and to make matters worse her girl friends made several catty remarks.

• • • •

The young man was included in the invitation at the same time but he made no reply to my letter. He was working away at that time so I saw him only once, accidentally, and while he tried to appear courteous he was only coldly polite.

• • • •

All of this has been a puzzle to me. Do you think the girl decided she disliked me and because of that was very rude? Or do you think she wanted this young man's attentions for herself and so influenced him and his friends against me? I am no longer interested in either of them—my interest died at the time of the last visit—but I would like to have your opinion as to what caused the change. I hope you will find time to answer me.

Sincerely yours, ANN.

A Common Experience

DEAR ANN: Judging from your testimony, it certainly appears as though your erstwhile girl friend had been campaigning against you among members of her set in the interval between your first and second visits. And since you attracted one of her long-time boy friends, jealousy seems the most plausible reason for her bout-face.

• • • •

Jealousy is said to be a subconscious feeling of inferiority to the person who arouses it, and the jealous person usually saves his face by rationalizing his reaction and finding reasons for disliking the person who threatens his supremacy. It's fortunate you weren't seriously committed to either the man or the girl, and feel no great sense of personal loss in the withdrawal of his interest and her friendship.

• • • •

Don't allow the episode to detract from your self-esteem. Just remember such experiences are fairly common to feminine members of every social group. It occurs to me you may have given the girl a talking point against you by encouraging too open the young man's interest. She may have called you silly or fickle or flirtatious or boy-crazy. Or, she may have told the boy you boasted of his attentions, whereas you might only have expressed quite innocently your pleasure at meeting him, or your desire to know him better.

• • • •

It's sad but true that a girl gets farther socially after she has learned to keep a still tongue in her head, when it comes to confining the state of her emotions or her romantic ambitions to other girls. M. H.

Indian Lands of New York Called A Paradise for the Cartographer

Mrs. Henricks Finds Empire State Rich in Lore of the Red Man.

WITH ITS WEALTH of Indian legends and its romantic history, New York State is a map maker's paradise. At least Mrs. Walter A. Henricks of Penn Yan, N. Y., has found it so and also has discovered that a cartographer's work opens a new door to the past and develops an interest in reviving ancient arts.

While she compiled material for her Romance Map of the "Finger Lakes Region" of New York, she became interested in the problems of the Indians on the Tonawanda Reservation in Central New York. Now in Washington to attend the D. A. R. convention, she also is here to ask the Indian Bureau to provide a community building for those Indians.

At the Willard yesterday, Mrs. Hendricks, dressed in her blue and white costume — fashioned and beaded after the style of the Indians of the Revolutionary period—told something of her work as a cartographer, her interest in the Tonawanda Reservation, and her hopes for the future of the Indians of New York.

Means of Livelihood Seen.

"If Indians can be given an opportunity to revive their arts, the result will be a means of livelihood for them as well as a valuable artistic and historical contribution to our country," she said.

Work along the line of reviving such arts as beadwork, silversmithing, wood carving and Indian painting (to illustrate native legends) is already being done on both the Tonawanda and Cattaraugus reservations, according to Mrs. Henricks. "Dr. Arthur C. Parker, historiographer and director of the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences, is in charge of this work, which is creating much interest," she said.

She further explained that the T. E. R. A., a State relief organization, was furnishing materials, "but for lack of a proper place to work, the Tonawanda Indians are having to use an abandoned school house. They need a community building."

If the latter is obtained, it will provide a spacious studio, a carpenter shop, and a museum where Indian relics can be preserved—relics, such as Iroquois arrow heads, turtle shell rattles, ancient war clubs and water drums, which might otherwise be lost, according to Mrs. Henricks.

Every Phase of Life Represented.

A map compiled by Dr. Parker and Mrs. Henricks and recently completed, represents another effort to preserve Indian history. Called a "Drama-Story Map of the Empire State," it is a pictorial represenation of every phase of Indian life of the past. The pictures have been drawn and painted by Robert Gribbroek. The map will be printed on birch-bark paper and executed in delicate colors. A widely-known historian and an authority on Indian legends, Dr. Parker, assisted by Mrs. Henricks, is also writing a book to be used with the map.

"Probably no person in New York has done more than Dr. Parker to revive and preserve Indian art," Mrs. Henricks said. "Products of his Indian Art Project are to be sent to the Rochester Museum where they will be kept for exhibitions and loans. If this revival of the red man's arts develops into the profitable industry that is expected, it will mean the dawn of a new economic era for the Indians."

Wisconsin Orders Cheese With All Restaurant Meals

Cheese with your meals has now become the rule in restaurants in the State of Wisconsin. A bill making cheese as well as butter mandatory with all restaurant meals costing 25 cents or more has recently been passed by the State Legislature.

The bill was opposed by Mrs. Mary O. Kryszak, only woman member of the Legislature, on the ground it would endanger the waistlines of Wisconsin women.

"I am for the farmers and cheese and butter producers," said Mrs. Kryszak, "but I feel that this bill is going to make it harder for fleshy persons to keep their weight down.

The bill provides that one-third of an ounce of cheese and two-thirds of an ounce of butter be served with each meal. Its provisions are to be in effect until March 1, 1937.

One Notrump Response.

Since a one notrump response to an opening suit one-bid is a limited response showing a maximum of about two honor-tricks and in all probability considerably less, a raise of such a one notrump response to two must be a strong bid. Consequently, the winning player, in accordance with 1935 Approach-Forcing bidding principles, will unhesitatingly bid three notrump on the slightest ray of hope when his partner raises to two.

The East-West three notrump contract on the hand below was beaten by very fine defense by the South player. However, East and West did have a good play for the hand and might have made their contract with a slight slip on the part of the defense or a brilliant guess by the declarer.

West, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

West	North	East	South
1◇	Pass	1NT(1)	Pass
2NT(2)	Pass	3NT(3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

2—With six almost certain tricks at notrump, West boldly raises to two of that suit rather than make the weaker call of two diamonds.
3—East, with a diamond fit and an Ace, a Queen and two Jacks, goes to game almost automatically.

The Play.

South opened his fourth best heart (the six), North playing the Jack and East stayed off with his Ace. The heart Queen was continued and when the declarer held up again (not knowing that North held only two cards of the suit) the burden of the defense was squarely on South's shoulders. South permitted North's Queen to hold instead of overtaking it and clearing the suit—virtually forcing the latter to shift to clubs.

The club shift defeated the contract. Whether or not declarer took dummy's Ace, immediately, the defense could set up three club tricks. When North later got in with the Ace of spades, declarer could not escape a two-trick set. Had South overtaken the second heart and continued the suit, hoping to get the lead later with his club King, three-odd would have been made.

Comment.

It is easy to see that had East won the second round of hearts, his contract would have been a lay-down, but East had no way of telling how the hearts were divided.

National Group Opens Meeting Here Monday

Daughters of American Colonists Will Hold Annual Assembly.

THIS is truly convention month for Washington. Just as the excitement of the D. A. R. convention subsides, the National Society, Daughters of the American Colonists, will open its convention.

The fourteenth annual general assembly will convene at 10 o'clock Monday at the Carlton Hotel. Mrs. Joseph S. Calfee, national president, will preside.

Among the important business to be discussed will be plans for the pilgrimage to Cape Henry, April 26, to unveil the Memorial Cross in honor of the first English colonists who landed in America.

The national executive board, consisting of all national officers and State regents, held a meeting yesterday at 2 o'clock. They will meet again at 10 o'clock Tuesday.

An informal dinner will be given tomorrow night at the Carlton for the members and their friends. Harry Stoops, opera singer, will give a program of music.

The object of this patriotic, historical and educational society is to research, record and publish the history and deeds of the American colonists; to commemorate deeds of colonial interest, to inculcate and foster the love of America and its institutions by all its residents, and to obey its laws and venerate its flag.

Wells Club Luncheon.

THE WELLS COLLEGE CLUB will hold its annual Easter luncheon Monday at the Sulgrave Club. The guest of honor will be Miss Pauline Jones, secretary of the Alumnae Association and chairman of District 2 of the Association of Collegiate Alumni. A number of girls at local preparatory schools who are interested in the possibility of attending Wells will also attend the luncheon.

Among the alumnae prominent in Washington are Mrs. George G. Whitney, president of the club; Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace, Miss Mildred Terrett, Miss Alice Hill and Mrs. Perkins Coville.

An Easter luncheon is a tradition among Wells Alumnae clubs throughout the country, and all alumnae and former students at Wells endeavor to get in touch with clubs in their neighborhoods for the occasion.

The ladies of Christ Church of Georgetown will sponsor a dinner from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock Monday at the parish hall, Thirty-first and O streets northwest.

New Ideas Are Suggested For Easter Egg Dyeing

Directions Are Given for Making Unusual Designs.

EASTER, like Christmas, causes us to tear our hair in a frantic search for something different and novel with which to please the youngsters.

Have you ever watched Johnny's face light up when he discovered that the bunny had turned artistic and left an egg with an entirely new design on it? His evident pleasure at finding a departure from the conventional solid reds and yellows and blues is adequate compensation for the slight additional labor involved.

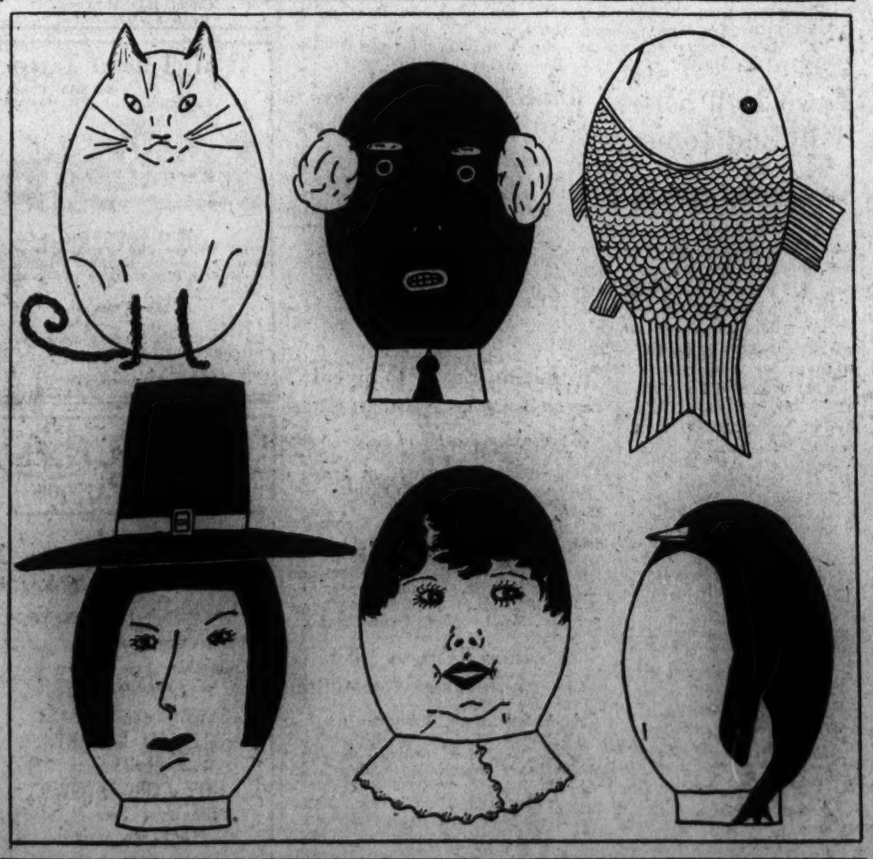
To make Uncle Tom, dip a hard-boiled egg into black dye, and when it is dry, paste on cotton hair and eyebrows, and mouth, nostrils and eyes which have been cut out of paper. His collar, as well as that of the penguin, the doll and the Puritan, are simply narrow strips of cardboard joined at the ends to form a circle the size of the egg. Excellent collars may be cut from the forms in the bottoms of egg cartons.

The hair and features of the doll are applied with water colors. The collar is covered with lace or flowered print.

The cat's ears are snips of paper pasted to the small end of the egg, and the whiskers, eyes, nose and mouth are painted on. This cat is white, but why not paint yours to match your own Tabby? The front legs and tail are sections of a pipe cleaner inserted into the shell through pinholes. If they are the proper length, Puss will stand up.

The hair and features of the Puritan are painted, and the hat is constructed of paper or cloth.



The penguin is a study in black and white. The bill is made of paper, and the feet are drawn on the pasteboard standard.

The fish may be a gold one or a rainbow trout, but give either one a paper tail and fins. Outline the scales with ink.

If there are no children in your family to enjoy an egg hunt, why not use the decorated eggs as place cards and favors?

Packet Includes The Essentials For Fast Facial

Tired Business Woman Finds It Handy in the Evening.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NO SOONER does spring blow in on us than our fancy turns wardrobe-ward. But it's to be lamented that many of us are so taken up with choosing the proper bonnet and most becoming print that we forget how important it is to give our faces a thorough going over. Now, right now, is the time to perk them up, to give them the bloom of youth and spring. All the grandeur of our new wardrobes will seem poor indeed if we gaze from under the brim of our pet Breton with the lack-luster countenance of winter.

A popular beauty specialist and one, by the way, noted for the daintiness of her products, offers a special package containing the three essentials for a quick and complete facial.

The package comes in two forms, one for oily skins, the other for dry. The first includes a luscious, delicately scented cleansing cream, a dry skin mixture and a skin lotion fragrant as orange blossoms.

The oily or normal skin package contains cleansing creams especially adapted to overly oily faces, a cream to keep the skin soft and vital looking, and a lotion for refining the skin texture.

Now about the price of this package——. You simply won't believe it's only $1 when you learn who puts it out. You've probably associated her name with very expensive cosmetics for so long that you'll doubt she makes this astounding offer for such a nominal sum.

She caters particularly to the busy woman who comes home, wants to give her face a going over but hasn't 30 or 40 minutes to spare. Ordinarily she reaches for her cleansing cream, daubs this on and calls it a day. With this extra special little package, however, she can use the very finest preparations, cleanse her face, nourish it and tone it all in a very few minutes. The results—she looks better, feels better and her skin is greatly improved.

Easter Spirit Displayed.

Once inside the doors of a downtown store you're bound to be brimful of the Easter spirit. It's not just the large baskets filled with tall white lilies and the softly lighted, luminous placques looking like stained glass cathedral windows. It's the little things on the counters that make you feel there's a bit of Easter in every nook and cranny. Little things, such as a spool of ribbon showing an Easter parade of bunnies, biddies and tiny spring blossoms.

Not much to speak of maybe, this ribbon at 5 cents a yard, but such fun to have for tying up Easter remembrances, and so appropriate, too!

Boys' Suit Bargain.

"I certain dread Saturday!" groaned a certain young woman to her husband. He looked up from his paper long enough to ask "Why?"

"Oh, heavens, I have to take Sonny shopping," she explained, "and you don't know what a job that is!"

"Is that all?" he wanted to know. "Why should that be a job? I'll take him myself!"

And he did.

Sonny returned with checked trousers, striped coat and a figured shirt. The bill was outrageous. His father was a nervous wreck.

That, however, was last year. That certain young mother is taking Junior shopping herself this season, but she's not dreading it.

She has just learned that a downtown store is featuring some boys' suits at amazingly low prices, some very fine suits, too.

All of them come with two pairs of short pants and can be matched with long pants. Suits, $8.95. Long trousers, $2.95. If one cares to purchase one pair of short pants and one pair of long, $1.50 will be allowed on the long ones. For $5.95 there are plain and checked coats to match the suits. They come in brown, tan and gray.

"Bath Jewels" Offered.

Have you ever heard of "bath jewels?" They are well worth looking into. At present they are featured in the toilet goods department of a local store.

One small box contains 15 "jewels," each one a wealth of fragrance. It's almost impossible to believe that just one small "jewel" can literally transform a tub of water into a perfumed bath. But so it does. These jewels are solidified perfume. As soon as they're dropped into the water they dissolve and give forth their delightful fragrance.

They come in several scents, bouquet, which is a blend of spring blossoms, rose, lilac and pine.

There's many a man who eschews a perfume for himself, but he'll simply dote on a pine "jewel" which gives his bath a real woodsy, out-of-doors scent.

Match Boxes Are Out.

Convenient, practical, attractive, and useful are the little match plants in a local store. Remember the little flower boxes of matches we mentioned the other day? Well these are similar except they represent a single pot of plants in full bloom. The price, 25 cents. Odd little things for bridge favors.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Chic Pajamas Useful For Lolling or Sleeping

Pattern No. 700.

WHEN PAJAMAS are so becomingly tailored as these, in one of the stunning, new novelty cottons, they make loafing an extremely well-dressed activity. A bright Windsor tie adds a lively color accent. The blouse has an inverted pleat in the back and may be made with long or short sleeves. Of course, this design is suitable for sleeping pajamas, too, either in cotton or in soft silk crepe. The pattern is so easy to follow, with the large instruction chart which accompanies it, that it would be an easy matter to make two or three of these pajama outfits to laze in all through the summer. The pattern is cut in sizes 14 to 20, 32 to 38. Size 16 (34) requires 3¾ yards of 35-inch material for the short-sleeved version.

Fried Chicken Recipe Wins Prize for Mrs. Agnes McNeilly

Bride Who Failed in First Attempt Passes Rules On to Newlyweds; Second Award Goes to Miss Dulaney.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE BRIDE who had a "terrible time" when she first tried to cook chicken advocates these rules, passed on to her by an experienced cook, for newlyweds about to try to fry chicken. Her recipe this week has won first prize in The Post's contest for chicken dishes.

Here are her rules: The temperature is important. It should be moderate to retain both the juiciness and the delicate tenderness of the meat. Too high a heat toughens the meat, making it stringy and dry. A good rule to follow, however, is to brown the pieces with a fairly high fire at first, then lower the flame and finish cooking, thus to develop the flavor and tender the meat. Crispness means goodness—that smooth, crisp, golden crust that means goodness in fried chicken to many diners we gain by dipping the pieces first in crumbs or flour, then in egg beaten with one tablespoon of cold water and then again in crumbs or flour.

Or you may French fry your chicken sections. Often the chicken is partly steamed or simmered, then wiped dry, dipped in batter and fried in deep, hot fat (375 degrees F.).

First prize, $3, in The Post's recipe contest for chicken dishes goes to Mrs. Agnes McNeilly, 620 Carroll avenue, Lyon Park, Va., for her recipe for fried chicken; second prize, $2, is awarded Miss Beulah Dulaney, 3520 Quesada street northwest, for her recipe for economical picnic chicken, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. A. L. Sherman, 3700 Massachusetts avenue, for her recipe for chicken a la Puerto Rico.

Honorable mention is awarded Mrs. W. L. Wallace, 1301 Belmont street northwest; Mrs. O. B. Taylor, 1426 M street, for her recipe for Mississippi fried chicken; Mrs. J. W. Morgan, 1688 Fulton avenue, Birmingham, Ala., for her recipe for chicken pan pie, and Mrs. Thomas W. Howorth, 132 Thirteenth street southeast, for her recipe for pan-fried chicken.

Fried Chicken.

Cut a young chicken as explained above, dividing it in about 12 pieces. Rub each with salt and pepper. Next, roll them in flour, then dip into egg, which has been beaten with 2 tablespoons of water. Finally, shake them in a bag containing sifted bread crumbs. Have ready a skillet in which one-half pound of salt pork, cut into cubes, has been fried out. Take out the cubes when the fat has been cooked from them and put in the pieces of chicken. Cook slowly, covered, for about one hour, turning the pieces frequently to give them an even, brown crust. When tender, transfer the chicken to a hot platter and add to the fat the following to make a cream gravy:

Flour equal to the amount of fat, 1 cup cream (not milk), salt and pepper to taste.

Economical Picnic Chicken.

One hen, cleaned. Pour over hen 2 cups of boiling water, add 1 large onion, sliced, 1 bay leaf, 2 teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper and a few peppercorns. Cover tightly and simmer until tender in the oven at 350 degrees F., or a very moderate oven. Put meat through coarse meat grinder with 1 dozen hard-cooked eggs. Season with salt and pepper to taste, using very little of the chicken broth. Line pan with cheesecloth, put half of the chicken in, then place whole hard-cooked eggs through the center. Add rest of the chicken and press down with heavy weight. Put in ice box and slice next day.

Chicken a la Puerto Rico.

3-pound chicken
1-3 cup butter
1 large onion
½ pound shelled peanuts
1 level tablespoon curry powder
2 teaspoons salt
1 fresh coconut, grated.

Melt butter in hot frying pan, add chicken cut in pieces for serving and cook ten minutes, turning frequently. Transfer chicken and browned butter to sauce pan. Add onion cut in thin slices, salt, curry powder and hot water to cover. Simmer until chicken is tender. Then remove. Strain liquid and thicken with flour, diluted with enough cold water to pour easily. Pour gravy over chicken arranged around mound of hot rice.

In serving, pass grated coconut first, which is to be sprinkled over rice and gravy, then peanuts which have been chopped fine. This combination should be blended on the plate so that one does not get a preponderance of any one flavor.

Object—Not Matrimony

By Lillian Barker

On her eighteenth birthday Katrina Harman receives two great shocks. She discovers that her fortune has been lost, and that Tazewell Bronson has no intention of marrying her, although he offers to be her "protector" and pays her debts, to the extent of several hundred dollars, for which she gives him her I. O. U. She determines not to see him again. She leaves one job, when he finds out where she is working; then goes to work as a companion to an elderly woman, Mrs. Fremys-Dillon. He discovers her again, comes to see her and tries to explain his position, that he has seen so much of unhappy marriages, including his own parents', that he fears to marry. Through his visit she loses her job and discovers shortly after that he has sailed for Rome on the same ship with a beautiful Italian countess.

"LATE TODAY," said the dealer, a bearded old man who always had a welcoming smile for Trina, the most courteous and unfailing of all his innumerable customers. "I'm expecting it, though, any moment, Miss. Will you wait? Or would you prefer to come back in 5 or 10 minutes."

Yes, there was Taz smiling down at a foreign, a Latin-looking girl whose arm was thrust affectionately through his and whose lips were very mirthfully parted as she smiled responsively up at him.

"The beautiful Contessa Luisa San Marco," read the legend beneath that picture. And "the beautiful Contessa Luisa San Marco," Trina repeated under her breath.

But how long had Tazewell known this smiling countess? Only since that midnight trip of his to Atlantic City, when he'd made his startling "confession" and all those declarations of love for her—credulous, forgiving, adoring Katrina Harman.

Lost in her own querying and conjecturing and wholly unconscious of people all around, persons racing in and out of the subway, Trina felt a tap on the shoulder from behind. Frightened, she right-about-faced and discovered Melvin Edwards.

"Mel! Mel Edwards! You scared me half to death!" Trina's exclamation was half-surprise and half-rebuke. Good-natured rebuke albeit.

"Did I, my dear?" I'm awfully sorry. Do forgive me. But I was so overjoyed just glimpsing you I reached out impulsively and touched your shoulder. How marvelous to strike up with you here, though, Trina! You can't imagine the times and times I've thought about you. And always envying that lucky dog, Tazewell Bronson.

Mel Was Delighted.

"I say 'lucky dog,'" Melvin seized the opportunity to explain, "because, until this morning, till just a few minutes ago in fact, when I bought that very tabloid I caught you staring at, I took it for granted you two were . . . were by this time very definitely engaged."

All the color receded from Katrina's face. Receded only to rush back in burning rimson flashes. But Mel mustn't see those blushes. Not Melvin Edwards!

Looking away from him and fastening her eyes again on the tabloid picture, Trina said:

"You'd . . . you'd already seen this, then? I'd only just spied it when you gave me that startling shoulder tap."

"Oh, had you? Well, I spied it ahead of you, about 15 minutes. On a Columbus Circle, a Fifty-ninth street newsstand. I never go in for tabloids, but this flashlight news picture of our boy friend in affectonate pose with the Italian countess—snapped aboard ship, obviously—hit me right between the eyes. So I got a copy of the tabloid . . . still have the thing in my pocket, as a matter of fact . . . and inside, in the famous gossip column, what do you suppose I found? About Taz and the countess?"

Pretended Nonchalance.

"What did you find?" Katrina feigned indifference, for all her fears, all her dread. "Do you mind if I see your paper?"

"Of course not." Mell thumbed the pages till he came to the item he was after. "There you are," his finger on the opening paragraph of the column, "take a look for yourself."

She Played a Part.

Now he was aboard that luxurious transatlantic liner, the Red—so was "the glamorous countess"—while she, the orphan, was again on the hunt for ads. A little forsaken, broken-hearted job-chaser that was what—and all—she was!

But before Melvin Edwards . . . Katrina gave him back the paper . . . she would most certainly play a part. The role of a woman-who-didn't-care. Who didn't in the least care what happened to the Tazewell Bronson - Maria - Luisa - San-Marco romance.

Mel, misled by her put-on nonchlance, chucked the tabloid into a "catch-all" receptacle at one end of the newsstand and remarked:

"The good-looking rascal got himself written up 'puh-lenty' in the papers today, didn't he? Pictured up, too. But," grinning, "I should worry if Taz wants to take unto himself a titled bride! He's out of my way at last and am I glad? For now you will let me give you the grand rush, won't you, Trina? We'll just play around . . . go places . . . and have the merriest time . . ."

She Told Her Story

"I'm a working girl, Mel," disclosed Katrina, "so my play times . . ."

"A working girl!" echoed Melvin, dumfounded. "I don't understand. Why, it seems impossible that you should be out . . . earning your living."

"I am, though." And very briefly Trina made him understand the reason for her altered circumstances.

Whereupon Melvin sympathized. "What a shame, a young, inexperienced, wealthy girl like you robbed of your entire inheritance by a guardian your father had trusted so implicitly! But you've shown your mettle, child, and how! Launching out on your own asking and taking no help from any one! All of which makes me admire you more than ever and I always did admire you, Katrina. Extravagantly. Where are you working now, though? Tell me."

"Nowhere, unfortunately," in a voice of despair. "And what do you think I came to this newsstand for? To buy a paper for its help-wanted ads, nothing else. An afternoon paper that's still to come up from the newspaper building. I'm looking for a position as companion, you see. I've . . . I've had some little experience as one."

Mel Knew of a Job.

"Why, Trina," Mel, all happy excitement, grabbed her hand, "this is what I call luck. The swellest kind of luck. Only last night my sister-in-law, my brother's widow, Rosa Lombardi, the Metropolitan prima donna, asked me . . . we were having dinner together in her penthouse which is in he same apartment house where I have my bachelor quarters . . . to find her a secretary-companion. And here, without turning a hand, I find you. You who are looking for just such a job and who would, I know, suit Rosa right down to the ground!

"So," signaling to a taxi-driver and helping Katrina into an up-to-date silver-flashing streamline cab, "I'd started to the Lafayette to lunch, but instead I'll hustle you up to Rosa's. She has a concert in Carnegie Hall this afternoon and we must get this job business settled before she leaves home."

One Happy Family.

"I hope," wished Trina from her corner of the taxi, "it'll be settled in my favor. Of course you're a successful attorney and have never had the experience of running down ads . . . chasing after work, but sometimes searching for positions can be . . . nearly all the time it is so cruelly disheartening. I'm afraid, Mel, I'm getting pessimistic."

"No need to feel that way now," Melvin encouraged her, "for you'll click with Rosa. I know her and I know you, see? Besides, as the lawyer who looks after all her investments and as a brother-in-law she regards almost as a brother, what I say goes with the lady. Nine times out of ten. And if I do hook this job for you, as I will, my lovely Katrina, won't we be one happy family?"

"If you do hook it," Trina's drawl was none too confident, "I believe we will, Mel. If you r-e-a-l-l-y d-o hook it."

Post Conducts Recipe Contest For Lemon Pie

LEMON MERINGUE pie is the top. Its position as a universal favorite demands special attention; so next week The Post's recipe contest will be devoted exclusively to recipes for one of America's most popular desserts.

For all its popularity, lemon meringue pie is a difficult dessert to make. Inexperienced cooks find that their pie too frequently becomes runny or so thick as to be rubbery. How do you housewives overcome this problem? Do you use cornstarch, flour, a little of both or perhaps merely eggs to thicken your pie?

Send all recipes to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Washington Post. Three prizes, $3, $2, and $1 will be awarded for the three best recipes. Only one recipe from each contestant will be considered for a prize.

Type your recipes if possible. If not, write them neatly in ink. Check all recipes carefully for omissions. The name and address of the sender should appear on each sheet submitted. All recipes should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

Soap Used by Ancients as Antiseptic

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

ALTHOUGH the use of soap is mentioned in the Bible, its employment in the household and for cleansing purposes was probably not extensive until some time after the twelfth century. Body cleanliness among the Romans was proverbial, but the only description of soap manufacture appears to be that of Pliny, who mentions the boiling of goat's tallow with beechwood ashes. The Roman athletes anointed the skin with oil and apparently removed dirt and skin debris by means of massage, rubbing with fine sand.

Thirteenth century manuscripts mention soap manufacture in Italy, France and Germany. In 1622 James I of England granted a monopoly to a soakmaker who, for a tax of $100,000, was privileged to make 3,000 tons per year, a rather meager supply for the population of Britain of that day.

Dishes Spread Diseases.

Robert Koch, who discovered the tubercle bacillus, studied the action of soap upon bacteria and found that a solution of 1 part to 1,000 parts of water prevented their growth. Since Koch's time numerous investigators have demonstrated the killing effect of soap upon disease-producing organisms. It was shown that the stronger the solution the more rapid was its destructive effect.

Considerable evidence has accumulated indicating that improperly cleansed eating utensils constitute an important factor in the spread of such diseases as the common cold, pneumonia and influenza. Experiments with the pneumococcus (one of the organisms causing pneumonia) have shown that a soap solution of one-half of one per cent in dishwater is completely germicidal (germ killing).

Washing the hands with soap and hot water will greatly reduce the number of bacteria present, although the skin can not be made completely sterile, even though a brush is used and the scrubbing operation continued for many minutes. This is one of the reasons why surgeons wear sterile rubber gloves over thoroughly scrubbed hands.

Best Cleansing Agent.

How do soaps produce their effects? In simple terms, it may be stated that soap when mixed with water forms an emulsion. The particles appear to be in a sense elastic, capable of forming an extremely thin film; for example, a soap bubble. These soap films surround and loosen solid particles such as dirt and bacteria and enable us to get rid of them through the rinsing action of water. We have noted when washing soiled hands with soap and water that the suds may take on a grayish appearance due to the collecting action of the soap film on dirt.

Although soap and water will not kill all bacteria or remove them from the hands or a wounded surface, their cleansing effect is of the greatest value in reducing the number of organisms present on the skin in the vicinity of a wound. We must understand therefore that a combination of soap and water (hot water) constitutes the best and most available cleansing agent.

Not only in cleansing the body does soap prove death dealing to bacteria but there is no substance that can quite take its place in house cleaning. Woodwork, walls, floors and furniture—in fact, all solid surfaces on which bacteria may rest—can be cleaned with a soap solution.

Foul-smelling disinfectants will not be required in cleaning the sick-room if a fairly strong soapsuds is employed. Soap and water, plus fresh air, plus sunshine are our best disinfectants.

The skin of certain people is very susceptible to soap and its use is frequently followed by skin irritations and the development of a rash. Experiment will usually determine the particular type of soap that can be used by a given individual with safety.

Services Today At Baltimore For Garrison

Funeral services for Col. Fielding H. Garrison, 64, U. S. A., retired, outstanding medical historian, who died Thursday at Johns Hopkins Hospital, in Baltimore, will be held at Cook's undertaking establishment in Baltimore today. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery Monday, at 11 a. m. with full military honors.

A native of Washington, Col. Garrison was custodian of the Welch Memorial Library in Baltimore. He underwent an abdominal operation several days ago, and failed to rally. From 1899 to 1922 he was assistant librarian in the Surgeon General's office.

One of Col. Garrison's outstanding works was "An Introduction to the History of Medicine." The book went through four editions, and did much to attract public attention to the history of medical science. Col. Garrison was a regular contributor to the Bulletin of the New York Academy of Medicine.

He was a graduate of Johns Hopkins and Georgetown universities. Shortly after the United States entered the World War, he was commissioned major in the Medical Reserve Corps, and in 1918 he became a lieutenant colonel. He had charge of medical historical data which later were incorporated into the "History of the Medical Department of the United States Army in the World War."

In 1920 he became lieutenant colonel in the Medical Corps of the Regular Army and served in this capacity until his retirement as a colonel in 1930. With the exception of two years in Manila, his whole Army service was in the Army Medical Library.

Surviving Col. Garrison are the widow, Mrs. Clara A. Garrison, and three daughters, Mrs. Shirley, Heare, Miss Margaret Garrison and Miss Patricia Garrison.

Increase in 'Drunks' Blamed on Transients

Frederick, Md., April 19 (AP).—Drunkenness on the streets of Frederick increased in 1934 as compared with four previous years—But police here attribute the increase to an unusually large number of transients during the year.

Figures compiled by Police Sergt. William Y. Anderson show a total of 272 arrests for public drunkenness here during 1934 as compared with 218 for 1933. In 1932, the record year, 318 arrests were made on that charge.

Cabinet Group Told to Probe Cotton 'Crisis'

President's Action on Tax and Imports Marks Second Victory for Mills.

degree of obsolescence, and plans for the institution of proper credit facilities to enable them to make needed adjustments.

2. Analysis of foreign-trade opportunities.

Exhibiting an impatience with some arguments advanced by textile interests, Mr. Roosevelt flatly stated that obsolescence of machinery and methods is perhaps the greatest reason for the industry's parlous condition.

Mill Loans Indicated.

Thus, he indicated that the loaning of Government money to promote plant efficiency may be an outstanding result of the committee's study. The RFC has many millions of funds on hand for loans for just such a purpose.

Mr. Roosevelt's attention was drawn to a statement by George A. Sloan, chairman of the Cotton Textile Code Authority, that 71 mills, employing 20,825 workers, have closed since last August. He countered that the cotton industry, from its beginning, has always been overproducing and closing, by turns.

Recent moves by the White House, in the face of demands by a coalition of New England and Southern representatives on Capitol Hill, have been in marked contrast to the attitude expressed last week. At that time, a delegation of New England Governors was rebuffed when they called to protest the processing tax and Japanese competition.

Only Wednesday, Mr. Roosevelt relented in regard to the importation of cotton goods from Japan by ordering an investigation by the Federal Tariff Commission. By acceding to demands for a further study, he appeared yesterday to be giving ground on the controversial processing tax.

This tax now amounts to 4.2 cents on every pound of cotton processed. Altogether, $185,000,000 has been collected from cotton mills in this way and redistributed to farmers who participate in the crop-reduction program. The Administration's contention has been that the cost of the tax is passed along to the consumer, thus having negligible effect; but the industry argues that the increase has been sufficient to cut down demand and turn consumers to other goods.

Tax Called Vital.

Up to the present, Mr. Roosevelt has been steadfast in his conviction that the processing tax is the best means to pay for the farm program. Even stronger views are held by Secretary Wallace, who has warned that the dropping of the cotton tax would arouse similar movements against other processing taxes and soon overwhelm the whole AAA campaign.

The President indicated that if the processing tax should be dropped a substitute must be found, since he is opposed to using the $4,880,000,000 relief fund for class (in this case, farm) purposes. His action in naming the Cabinet group, throwing open the whole cotton textile question to investigation, was taken on the petition of 15 Democratic Representatives of New England.

In his discussion of the textile situation Mr. Roosevelt remarked that a good part of the cotton cloth imports from Japan are made with spindles bought from New England mills that have closed. Despite the use of these old, in many cases inefficient, machines, Japan is able to compete in the American market because of low wages paid in Japan, he said.

The inclusion of the North-South wage differential as one factor to be studied was seen as a threat to the harmony which has featured movements of the textile bloc. New England Congressmen have protested the distinction whereby mills in their States must pay more for labor, while the Southerners contend that the NRA raised wages more, proportionately, in the South than in the North.

Meantime, Mr. Sloan asserted to Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, that the processing tax has thrown cotton goods out of their normal price relationship with other commodities. He said that for the period from August 1 to March of this year only 3,634,000 bales of cotton were processed, compared with 4,640,000 bales last year—a decline of 22 per cent.

G. O. P. to Open Intensive Drive For 1936 Soon

Fletcher Outlines Scheme to Set Up National Working Force.

By the Associated Press.

A broad plan for early expansion of the Republican National Committee's activities in preparation for the 1936 presidential campaign was tentatively drafted yesterday at party headquarters.

The new scheme conceived by Henry P. Fletcher, chairman, calls for raising funds to permit the creation of a working force comparable to the Democratic national committees. Its purpose is to create a nucleus organization of a permanent nature to direct the activities of volunteer workers in campaigns.

"Some feel that all the Republicans have to do is to sit by and let the Democrats defeat themselves next year by their own mistakes," the tentative draft said. "That the Roosevelt Administration and the Democratic Congress have made serious mistakes which have injured every section of the United States and carry a threat to our economic system and our political institutions is clear.

"But that this will result in a Republican victory in 1936 is by no means clear. The Republican Party will profit by these mistakes only in so far as it is able to take political advantage of them."

The plan proposes the establishment of publicity and speakers bureaus, expansion of the statistical division, reorganization of the women's division, the organization of a Young Republicans division, the opening of subheadquarters in Chicago with a member of the national committee in charge, the employment of field workers, and of an executive assistant to the chairman.

The whole move depends, however, on the getting of new funds. Fletcher and George F. Getz, of Chicago, balanced the committee's books on January 1, but since that time little money has come in and the committee again is in the red.

Informal conferences, meanwhile, are being arranged by Republican congressional leaders with Henry J. Allen, former Republican Senator from Kansas, and William Allen White, Emporia publisher. They are to meet today with G. O. P. leaders at luncheon and are to broadcast jointly tomorrow night.

Given by Kansans.

The Kansas delegation is giving the luncheon and Senators Vandenburg, of Michigan, and Dickinson, of Iowa, two Republican presidential possibilities, are to attend.

Representative Martin (Republican), Massachusetts, announced that Representative Christianson, of Minnesota, former Governor, would deliver the principal address at a meeting of Republicans from six New England States in Boston April 30.

The meeting, similar to that proposed for Midwestern Republicans in Kansas next month, will bring together State and national committeemen. Besides Martin and Christianson, young Theodore Roosevelt, president of the National Republican Club of New York City, will speak.

Martin said candidacies would not be discussed and expressed the view that the sentiment of New England folk "is inclined toward unpledged delegations in the next convention to elect the best representative possible."

"It's most encouraging," Martin said, "the way optimism is radiating from Republicans from all sections of the country.

"If conditions continue as they have for the past three months, the Republicans unquestionably will have a very good chance to win in 1936."

High School Pupil Dies Of Spinal Meningitis

A Western High School sophomore, Robert Ellis Tippett, 16, died of spinal meningitis in Gallinger Hospital yesterday. He will be buried today at Herndon, Va., where services will be held at the cemetery at 10 a. m.

An active student, he was graduated from Gordon Junior High School last February. He had lived here all his life. He suffered his first attack of the disease Wednesday and was removed to the hospital Thursday.

Curley Sounds Plea For Textile Harmony

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 19—A call to New England to dedicate itself to end industrial warfare with particular reference to the textile situation was sounded here today by Gov. James M. Curley, speaking at a Patriot's Day celebration.

Recalling a recent speech at Bowdoin College, Me., of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in which the latter deprecated the responsibility of the processing tax for the turmoil in the textile industry, Curley said:

"Secretary Wallace said that New England lacks courage and that we are 'whimpering' over our textile situation.

"I say to Secretary Wallace that the courage of New England and Massachusetts is the same today as it was 160 years ago when our forefathers led the fight for liberty.

"Massachusetts and New England are entitled to a fair fighting chance in this industrial war we are now facing.

"Let us give the American people a chance to transfer from welfare rolls to pay rolls.

"Put Americans back to work by buying only American-made goods."

Easter Sunrise Service Is Set at Cumberland

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 19.—The Cumberland Ministerial Union is sponsoring a sunrise service on the grounds of Memorial Hospital at 5 a. m. Sunday. The Rev. H. P. Baker, of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the Rev. Lucius G. Bridges, of the United Brethren Church, have arranged the program.

Winchester Acts to Get More Water

Engineers Recommend Cedar Creek Shed; Pollution Seen.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 19.—Members of the city planning commission today were preparing to recommend to the city council an immediate investigation with a view to utilizing the headquarters of Cedar Creek as a source for city water.

The decision was reached after it was learned that the National Board of Fire Underwriters considers the present supply inadequate for protection in event of a serious fire, and for the further reason that Maj. Richard Messer, of the State Health Department, has informed the commission that there is danger of pollution in the present spring sources.

Engineers who have made a study of potential sources of water for this city have informed the commission that, in their opinion, the Cedar Creek water shed, part of which is included in national forest boundaries, would be best fitted to meet the demands of the city. The headwaters, it is estimated, would supply water for a city of 300,000 population.

The planning commission has requested the engineers to revise the costs of the project, estimated at $400,000 in 1932, and to submit data for consideration of city council.

It is believed probable that water as needed would be supplied to all consumers along the valley turnpike from Winchester to Strasburg, if the plan as projected is adopted.

Tentatively, it is proposed to seek a public works grant for a portion of the cost and, if necessary, to issue bonds for the balance. It is estimated that three years would be required to complete the new system, which would require more than 20 miles of mains to reach the city.

The present supply is considered sufficient except in drought periods. Future industrial expansion, however, will make it necessary to augment the supply, officials declare.

The newspapermen resolved to take the lead in developing the program, which means more road building, better homes, wider recreational facilities, new industries, vocational and self-help education, and homesteading projects, financed by Federal aid.

Roosevelt Agrees to Take Part In Woodmont's Chair Ritual

Promises Officer of Rod and Gun Club There to Be Sixth Chief Executive of Nation to Sit in Its "President's Chair."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hancock, Md., April 19.—President Franklin D. Roosevelt will be the sixth President of the United States to sit in the 65-year-old "president's chair," cherished possession of the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club.

At a conference held at the White House last Saturday with Henry P. Bridges, secretary-president of the club, the President assured him that he would make a week-end stay at Woodmont shortly, where he planned to fish for trout in the artificial lake constructed several years ago on the club preserve.

The President plans to combine with his stay at Woodmont a visit to Berkeley Springs, W. Va., 8 miles distant, where he will visit 18 little sufferers from infantile paralysis who are being treated in the same warm baths where George Washington, while he was a young surveyor, bathed.

The five Presidents who have enjoyed the hospitality of Woodmont, founded over a half century ago by Admiral ("Fighting Bob") Evans, were Cleveland, Harrison, Arthur, Garfield and Hoover. The name plates of each are on the arm of the chair.

Mr. Bridges also conferred with Postmaster General James Farley, who also may make the trip to Woodmont with the President's party.

Under tentative plans the President's party will take over the club on a Friday evening and will remain there until Sunday night.

Col. Henry Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Arch Oden, secretary to Secretary of the Navy Swanson, will fish for trout this week at Woodmont.

Peach Growers Fight Increase In Rail Rates

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 19.—Fruit-growers and shippers here, individually and through the West Virginia Horticultural Society, are working to avert a 4 per cent increase in peach freight rates and an increase in icing charges for refrigerator cars from the present $4 to $5.75 per car which the railroads are proposing.

The jump in icing charges would affect not only peaches, but early apples shipped by rail, Transparents, Duchess, Wealthy, and in some cases the early fall varieties. Maryland and Pennsylvania refrigerated fruit would be given a smaller increase than West Virginia, under the schedule as proposed before the Interstate Commerce Commission. At the same time Virginia would receive a substantial decrease to $3.90 per ton for icing.

The 4 per cent increase in peach rates would result from the railroad freight heads' recommendation to increase the estimated weight of peaches in bushel baskets from the present 50 to 52 pounds.

Protests filed with freight traffic heads of the Pennsylvania, B. & O., and Western Maryland Railroads and with the general freight committee chairman, N. W. Hawkes, of New York, have placed the peach weight change on the docket for reopening and further discussion.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad traffic heads have notified shippers here they are not in favor of granting the lowered freight rates on apples from this belt into the Far South which the Southern Railway proposed, to offset partially the reduction to $1 per hundredweight granted the Northwest on their apples into the Far South territory. The Pennsylvania and Norfolk & Western Railroads had stated they would concur with the Southern in this reduction.

The B. & O. officials have stated that instead they are trying to organize the Southern carriers to seek suspension of the $1 rate granted the Northwest into that territory. Suspension of this emergency rate if obtained would restore the previous rate of $1.25 for the Northwest fruit.

Driscoll Goes Free as Nice Paroles 33

Physician Was Serving Term in Death of Young Nurse.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 19. — Dr. Albert D. Driscoll, Baltimore physician, who was sent to the House of Correction two years ago for manslaughter after the body of a young nurse was found in his office, today gained his freedom through a parole by Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Dr. Driscoll was sentenced to a 4½-year term in Criminal Court of Baltimore on April 14, 1932, after one of his codefendants became a State's witness and testified against him.

The nurse, Miss Nina Kelly, 25, whose home was in Luke, Allegany County, had died of peritonitis following an illegal operation she had undergone four days earlier.

Denied Performing Operation.

Dr. Driscoll, in reporting her death to the police, claimed she came into his office and asked for medical aid. He said he was called out on a case and when he returned she was dead. He did not identify her and it was not until a few days later that her landlady established her identity. Dr. Driscoll, a former police coroner, denied performing the operations.

Dr. Driscoll's parole was one of 33 given today by Gov. Nice to inmates of the Maryland Penitentiary and House of Correction. Two of them were to prisoners also serving terms on conviction of manslaughter.

Anders, who was convicted April 5, 1934, in the Montgomery County Circuit Court and sentenced to two and a half years in the House of Correction, and Samuel Vincent, who was convicted October 24, 1934, in the Frederick County Circuit Court and sentenced to a 15-month term in the House of Correction.

Two persons serving sentences resulting from violations of the banking laws in Somerset County also were freed. They were Omar Croswell, who was serving terms of 12 and 7 years for larceny and forgery, and Eloise McAllen Costen, who was serving four years for making false statements to bank examiners.

Court Audits For Virginia Begin July 1

90 Trial Units, Set Up Under 1934 Act, Will Face Scrutiny.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 19.—A thorough audit of all trial justices offices in Virginia will be made in July, which marks the end of the first year's operation of trial justice courts under the act of 1934, State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs announced today.

Mr. Downs said his entire force would go to work on the trial justices' audit on July 1 in order to complete the survey during that month. There are approximately 90 such offices in the State. Each county has one, with the exception of four counties that have not yet come within the scope of the 1934 law and several counties that have joined with neighboring counties in using one trial justice.

When the act took effect on July 1, 1934, the State auditor instituted a uniform accounting system in each trial justice's office. The forthcoming audit will show how efficiently the system has been applied. It will also reveal whether the respective counties are receiving more or less in fees than they are paying the justices in salaries.

Aimed at Efficiency.

The act of 1934 was for the purpose of increasing the efficiency of the administration of justice in the lower courts. The act ended all judicial functions of justices of the peace, who now only issue warrants.

Trial justices may try criminal cases, except felonies, and civil suits involving amounts up to $1,000. These cases are heard without a jury and may be appealed to higher courts.

When the act was passed, the State appropriated $400 annually until July 1, 1936, toward the operating cost of each trial justice court. Four counties which have not come under the act, but will be asked to, will receive that amount for the next fiscal year if they come under the act now, and possibly their pro-rated share for the remainder of the current fiscal year, William R. Shands, State research director, said today.

State Gets Some Revenue.

The State receives some revenue from the justice courts. Whether this income will equal the $40,000 annual appropriation will be shown by the audit. The 1936 Assembly must decide whether the appropriation will be continued.

A sub-committee of the Governor's advisory council, headed by Delegate Haskins Hobson, held its first meeting yesterday to consider recommendations on clarification of statutes governing operation of trial justice courts, particularly on points relating to fees and procedure.

Nice Won't Protest Relief Fund Cut; Sees Lighter Load

Maryland Contribution Is Described as Basis of Reduction.

FRA Aid Writes Letter to Gorfine

Speaker Feels Old-Age Pension No Part of Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 19.—Expressing the belief that the decline in Maryland's relief load will offset the $400,000 monthly cut made by the FERA in the State's allotment, Gov. Harry W. Nice today declared he would make no complaint unless he found the Maryland program was endangered.

In Baltimore today, Speaker Emanuel Gorfine, of the State House of Delegates, received a letter from Aubrey Williams, assistant to Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, explaining that reductions in Federal allotments were predicated upon the premise that Maryland is to furnish $5,000,000 yearly for relief.

The recent Legislature enacted a 1 per cent gross receipts tax to finance relief—$3,500,000 to go to direct relief and $1,500,000 for old-age pensions. Gorfine objects to the Federal cuts being based on the $5,000,000 total, contending the reductions should be on a $3,500,000 basis.

Levy Under Fire.

That levy has been under fire from merchants since its enactment. Gov. Nice said today that "the man does not live who can with any degress of accuracy predict the failure of the tax in the raising of the demanded $5,000,000, and neither will the first month's return on May 10 be indicative of its success or failure."

Nice added that he had "no intention" of calling a special session of the Legislature. "That would be foolish in the extreme," he said.

Williams' letter to Gorfine stated, in part:

"Our understanding was that there would be $5,000,000 made available for the relief of those at the present time in need, no matter whether it was applied through a system of old-age pensions or direct relief, and on that basis we have made the reductions."

Saying that he would confer with State Relief Administrator Harry Greenstein before filing a further protest with Federal officials, Gorfine explained that he felt the State's agreement with the Federal Government called for only $3,500,000 yearly to be furnished by the State for direct relief.

Position Explained.

That agreement was worked out during the recent State Legislature after three months of dickering between State and Federal officials. It provided that the State should furnish $3,500,000 for relief and $1,500,000 for old-age pensions.

Explaining his posiion, Gorfine said:

"There is no connection between the administration of direct relief and the administration of old-age pensions. Direct relief in Maryland is administered by Mr. Greenstein.

"All the money he gets goes for direct relief and he has nothing to do with old-age pensions.

"Thus it can be seen that the Washington officials are in error in lumping these amounts as Maryland's contribution to direct relief and reducing the allotment in accordance."

Gorfine also pointed out that the law providing for relief revenue through the 1 per cent gross receipts tax earmarked only $3,500,000 to direct relief and that only that amount can be expended, regardless of what the tax produces.

Key From Old Wood Carved for Queen

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, April 19.—From wood taken from historic Fort Loudoun, built by Col. George Washington, and from the Cedar Creek Battlefield, an official key to the gates of Winchester, once the gateway to the frontier lands beyond the Alleghenies, has been fashioned for Mlle. Nella Ververka who will reign as Queen Shenandoah XII during the Apple Blossom Festival, May 2 and 3.

John W. Nail, artist and sculptor, made the key.

Mlle. Veverka and Senator Harry F. Byrd will speak on a national hook-up, Monday, from WMAL, Washington, regarding plans for the festival, it was announced today.

Two Referenda Leave Election Methods in Status Quo.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 19. The political battle which has been waged on the University of Virginia campus over the system of nominating class officers for the academic department ended last night when two sets of ballots were counted, the results of which left the opposing factions exactly where they started.

The student body, faced with the choice of voting the power of selecting candidates out of the hands of two honorary social fraternities into the jurisdiction of the more representative student assembly, went to the polls yesterday and registered an overwhelming majority for immediate "reforms" on one ticket—and decisively rejected any change in the system on the other.

Honor Group's Proposal Lost.

The honor committee, consisting of the presidents of the four professional departments and the academic school, submitted for the approval of the student body a plan to inaugurate the new system next year. This was voted down by a count of 283 to 100.

College Topics, student newspaper, which was recently staffed by a new editorial board headed by Robert Musselman, and which precipitated the upheaval by launching a bitter attack on the nominating method, offered a ballot asking for the immediate adoption of the new plan to cover the pending elections. With space for "yes" only on the news organ's blank, 336 signified their desire to have the plan placed in operation immediately.

"Official" Sentiment.

It has been pointed out, however, that the honor committee's vote will constitute the "official" sentiment, and J. Davis Marret, chairman of the committee, said last night that "the students have expressed their opinion on the question and no further action will be taken."

He added that the regular election will be held Wednesday for the selection of next year's class officers from the slate of candidates proposed by Lambda Pi and Skull and Keys, the two societies which for many years have presented competing groups of nominees from their memberships.

In its attempt to remove the nominating power from "the hands of a small segment of the electorate," College Topics denounced the nonrepresentative manner of picking candidates and questioned the "fitness" of those named for the current election.

Easter Week Will Bring Superlative Entertainment to Both Stage and Screen

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

After several successive weeks of extended engagements and hold-over pictures, the seven-day period beginning today and tomorrow in the local cinemagogues boasts a diversity of new items worthy of the close scrutiny of the Capital's screen and star gazers.

Two co-stellar combinations not heretofore seen will be flashed upon an expectant public from the screens of the Earle and Loew's Palace, where, respectively, Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler will demonstrate with what utter compatability husband and wife may combine their talents, in "Go Into Your Dance," and the hypnotically platinum Miss Harlow and William Powell will pool their ample endowments in "Reckless," a picture with an easily recognizable factual background.

At the Belasco, beginning tomorrow—slightly contrary to house tradition under its new policy—George Arliss will add another portrait to his gallery of distinguished impersonations of celebrated characters in history by revivifying the heroic figure of Wellington, "The Iron Duke," who shattered the legend of an unconquerable Napoleon at Waterloo.

Arliss vs. Smith.

This will be doubly interesting to those who viewed Mr. Arliss' performance in "The House of Rothschild," because in that picture Wellington was played by the gruff and menacing veteran C. Aubrey Smith. It is a trifle difficult to reconcile the fellow Britishers, Messrs. Arliss and Smith, in the same parts. One or the other must be mistaken in his conception of what Wellington really was like.

The local stages, beginning today, are not deficient in their own claims to attention. George Olsen and his orchestra, with that inimitable songstress, Ethel Shutta in attendance, always is to be relied upon for something approaching the best there is to be had in modern music, and then, down at the Earle, will be that new quasi-permanent house feature, Herb Cook and His Three Little Words, a three-voice and piano act which we forecast will prove one of the most popular attractions the Thirteenth street house ever has had.

Just a Rich Week.

And as if that were not enough, Gracie Barrie will remain in town for a third week, Jack Holt and Mona Barrie will exercise the lure of mature talents in "Unwelcome Stranger," at the Metropolitan, and at Loew's Columbia, Carl Brisson, the European favorite, and the brilliantly gifted Mary Ellis will lend luster to whatever the authors and composers have afforded them in "All the King's Horses."

So you see, the impending week is one rich in promise of superlative entertainment at the hands of artists whose attainments are such as to command respect.

In short, what it is that has overtaken us is Easter Week. Easter Week is one of those infrequent intervals in the theatrical year that may infallibly be looked upon as a brief period of golden harvest for those on both sides of the box-office.

The present one, it seems to me, is particularly fruitful in the variety and virtue of its offerings.

It is interesting to have on my desk a copy of the report of the committee of better films, submitted by Mildred Lewis Russell, chairman, to the annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution, now in session in the Capital.

I have read this report carefully and find that it reflects a point of view that frequently has been expounded in these columns. Perhaps it may best be epitomized by quoting one sentence written by Mrs. Russell: "Never before has there been a year of such progress in the work for clean, fine films as 1934-35."

That, as we have so insistently remarked before, is precisely the way we feel about it.

Picking the "ten best of the year" for Jack Alicoate and his Film Daily next time is not going to be so easy. Making it a choice of the "25 best of the year" would simplify it a bit for those who really take their voting seriously.

Last of Season.

The Pierce Hall Players have selected Arnold Ridley's hilarious, three-act mystery drama, "The Ghost Train," for their final offering of the season.

Tryouts for leading and supporting roles will be held in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, tonight at 8 o'clock. Director George Farrington will supervise the casting of the play, assisted by Elinor Cox Karsten, Frank Baer and Howard F. Wentworth.

Comparative veterans in the theater will recall that it was Claudette Colbert, this season's winner of the feminine acting award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, who was featured in the original Broadway production of "The Ghost Train."

The play also was successfully presented here a few seasons back by the National Theater Players, whose eleventh consecutive season will be inaugurated by an Actors' Fund benefit performance in the National Theater on Sunday night, April 28.

The melody gems from Victor Herbert's memorable operetta, "Naughty Marietta," will be combined in the overture selection to be played by the orchestra under the conductorship of Prof. Lampkin at Loew's Fox this week. This will be a contribution to the music of Eastertide worthy of particular note. It will give a foretaste, too, of what may be expected to be heard in the way of pure melody when "Naughty Marietta" comes to the screen of Loew's Palace next week in film form, with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy singing the roles created on the stage by Emma Trentini and Orville Harrold. In the overture, Prof. Lampkin will feature Dennis O'Moore, soloist, who will sing both "The Palms" and "Sweet Mystery of Life."

Zanuck Celebrates.

Upon his arrival in New York City for the celebration of the second anniversary of Twentieth Century Pictures—"The House of Rothschild" was the first anniversary picture—and the opening of "Cardinal Richelieu," starring George Arliss, at the Radio City Music Hall, and Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," with Fredric March and Charles Laughton, at the Rivoli Theater, Darryl Zanuck, vice president in charge of production, under the presidency of Joseph M. Schenck, announced his company's plans for the ensuing season.

Twentieth Century is doubling its production schedule for the next year. Tentative plans call for 12 feature pictures, as opposed to 6 for the current season. All, as heretofore, are to be released through United Artists.

Ten screen plays already are in the hands of a large writing staff, with two more being plotted for adaptation to the celluloids. They are slated for the cameras and microphones beginning in July.

Stars under contract to Twentieth Century include Ronald Colman, Fredric March, George Arliss, Wallace Beery, Lawrence Tibbett and Loretta Young.

Directors All Aces.

Among the directors upon whom the energetic Mr. Zanuck relies for the perfection of his product are Gregory La Cava, Roy Del Ruth, John Ford and Rowland V. Lee. Not one of these but has one or more "super-specials" to his credit.

The staff of writers who are adapting the scripts to the uses of the cinema includes in its membership Nunnally Johnson, Bess Meredyth, Garrett Fort, George Marion, jr., Phillip McDonald, Harold Long, Howard Smith and W. P. Lipscomb. Not a great deal of fault can be found with this list.

Expansion even has extended to the executive conduct of Twentieth Century affairs, with William Goetz a new member of the organization, with the title of vice president and associate producer. William Dover will be business manager, Aiden Roark, scenario editor, and Raymond Griffith, former actor who lost his voice, and Henry Duffy, known to Washington's earlier theater—"Abie's Irish Rose," remember, with Arthur Leslie Smith?—will serve also as associate producers.

Here Is the List.

"Ivanhoe," adapted from the novel by Sir Walter Scott. It will be produced as Twentieth Century's most lavish spectacle, and will have an all-star cast.

"Sing, Governor, Sing!" with Paul Whiteman and his band, Phil Baker and his stooges, Bettle and Bottle, and Rubinoff. Songs and musical score by Gus Kahn and Arthur Johnson.

Four films for which no stars have been selected are "Nile Patrol," by Phillip McDonald; "Gentlemen, the King," by Howard Smith; "Earthbound," by W. P. Lipscomb, and "It Had to Happen," by Howard Smith.

The executives of the Roadside Theater, last summer's most successful "barn theater" group, are in court out at Rockville, Md., today, endeavoring to find out what legally can be done about the demolishment of many of their sets, props, furnishings and whatnot of the summer theater, which, rumor has it, was "sold out from under them" when the one-time shoeheel factory changed ownership. The case was up yesterday but was carried over until today for such reasons as the court evidently considered good and sufficient. Just a bit of preseason drama, seasoned a little more highly than usual!

Season's Greeting Note.

With Jimmy Cagney getting along with his filming of "G-Men," a flicker having to do with the Department of Justice agents' running down of public enemies, I hope he enjoys his Easter yeggs!

Never mind the handcuffs, Chief. I'm not resisting!

Male Stars Also Adorn Cinema

Inquest Is Set In Crash Death Of Van E. Rouse

An inquest into the death of Van E. Rouse 40, of Washington, who was killed early today in an auto accident at Berwyn, Md., will be held next Wednesday night at Hyattsville by Acting Coroner George S. Phillips.

Rouse, head of a Washington building supply firm that bears his name, was said to have been driving alone on the Baltimore Boulevard when his sedan was struck by a large transfer truck. He was traveling toward Washington. The truck was going in the opposite direction.

Both vehicles were overturned and badly damaged. Prince Georges County Policeman Claude Reese held Ernest Roberson, colored, of 429 V street northwest, under $1,200 bond for action of the coroner's jury. Royal Stevens, Penns Grove, N. J., hitch-hiker and passenger in the truck, said by police to have appeared recently before a Senate investigating committee in behalf of the soldier bonus, was held as a State witness.

Dr. O. E. Etienne, who lives near the scene of the accident, said Rouse died of a fractured skull and internal injuries. His body was removed to Gasch's undertaking establishment, Hyattsville.

Federal Farm Aids Gather Fruit Data

Virginia, West Virginia Orchards Surveyed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg W. Va., April 19.—A group of U. S. Department of Agriculture men and their aids, nine in all, who have been conducting a survey of certain phases of apple-growing in nearby Virginia counties, moved this week into Berkeley County, to spend a week or two interviewing some 50 orchardists. They will go next into Pennsylvania's orchard belt, then to Maryland and Delaware, completing their studies for this belt.

The group expect to ascertain from the records of growers the per-acre yield of apple trees by varieties; the age and bearing influences, such as soil types, for each orchard; the per-acre price received, and information on distribution methods and prices. They hope to cover the last four years in the survey.

The information obtained will be used as an up-to-date base for computing the department's estimates on the apple crop and prices for this apple belt. The crew expects to have the results of their work published within a few months, W. H. Youngman, of the department, said.

Chinese Authorities Take New Drastic Steps to Offset Disastrous Effects of Soaring World Silver Price, Following Latest American Move.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 19.—The renewed rapid rise in the world price of silver to the neighborhood of 70 cents an ounce, which has followed the increase in the price paid by the United States Government for newly mined domestic silver to 71.11 cents an ounce, is having the expected unhappy repercussions on China. Despite her flexible tax on the exportation of the white metal, Chinese currencies have risen in relation to other currencies, particularly the dollar. Chinese authorities are thus compelled once again to take action to counteract the severe deflationary effects on China of the American silver policy.

The committee for the study of silver values and commodity prices, which was created by the Chinese ministry of industries, has rendered a report in which it definitely advocated the abandonment of the silver standard by China. "The value of the Chinese dollar must cease to be dependent upon fluctuations in the value of any fixed weight of silver or gold," says the committee. "This step is essential to any measure which aims to bring the value of money under national control."

Report Favors Shift to Foreign Exchange Standard.

The report concludes with a recommendation that China adopt a foreign exchange standard or a flexible gold exchange standard for her currency, in place of the existing silver bullion standard. It is not yet clear how far the Chinese government may follow the committee's recommendations eventually, but meanwhile temporary measures are being taken to protect the present silver standard.

It must be understood that the situation at the moment is not only bad, but getting worse. China has lost large quantities of silver during the past two years. Last year the excess of silver exports over imports amounted to 259,941,000 yuan. There has been a further decline in stocks of silver held at Shanghai so far this year. The country is not in position to deplete further her greatly reduced monetary reserves without serious effects.

Under the terms of the international silver agreement concluded in 1933 at the London world economic conference, the large quantities of monetary silver held in India can not be exported. Since the United States has already absorbed a large part of the floating supply of silver in the world under its purchase program, and is still bound by law to buy vast additional quantities, the Chinese are convinced a further sharp rise in the price of silver is inevitable. This would seriously derange the Chinese currency system, both by raising the foreign exchange value of the yuan and by drawing additional quantities of the white metal out of China.

Chinese Government Takes Corrective Measures.

In order to meet the situation temporarily, the Chinese government has asked Chinese and foreign banks to cooperate in a voluntary embargo on silver exports. By this measure, as well as the export tax, it is hoped to prevent any further reduction in the country's available supply of monetary silver. In the second place, stricter measures are being taken to prevent the hitherto common practice of smuggling out of the country of silver, which does not pay the tax. Thirdly, the rise in price is expected to bring out considerable quantities of the white metal previously hoarded privately, thus adding to monetary stocks of the metal.

The Chinese government also has taken steps to increase the capital of the Bank of China from 20,000,000 yuan to 100,000,000 yuan. This move is designed to increase the prestige of the central bank, and thus to enable it to expand the amount of its notes in circulation, despite a strong Chinese prejudice against the general use of paper money. Increased use of these bank notes would relieve in some degree the monetary stringency that has been caused by the drain of silver, which has been exported chiefly to the United States. Also, the government is seeking to encourage Chinese banks to extend credit more freely in order to effect a corresponding increase in bank deposits, which would furnish an additional substitute for silver money. Some progress has been made in this direction, it is reported here.

If the measures outlined above should fail to stem the outflow of silver from China, and if efforts to stimulate increased use of paper money and bank deposits should fail, China will have to effect a more radical change in her whole monetary system. This is especially difficult for a country where the bulk of the people trust nothing but metallic money.

The Chinese wonder why so rich a country as the United States insists upon disrupting their monetary system. Like T. V. Soong, president of the Bank of China, they can "see no sense" in the American silver purchase policy.

California-Hawaiian Sugar Refining Corporation had no announcement of any change in its Western territory price, which stands at $4.90, but raised its price in Eastern territory to $5.10.

Cotton Trading Is Evening Up Before Easter

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—Trading in cotton futures this week was largely of an evening-up character in anticipation of the Easter holiday suspension.

At the outset the market appeared to have enough buying power to extend the generous advance of the previous week, but later the movement met some resistance.

July sold off from 11.75, the high point of Monday, to 10:35 on Thursday or about $2 a bale from the best, after which prices steadied on covering and trade buying. That delivery closed Thursday at 11.64 compared with 11.57 at the close of the previous Friday.

Agitation for removal of processing taxes continued notwithstanding the views recently expressed by the Administration with reference to payment of farm benefits.

Meanwhile, there have been further reports of domestic mill curtailment and following the rise of the previous week, the demand for cotton cloths in the primary markets tapered off, although sales during the past two weeks the supposed to have fully equaled current production for the same period.

Liquidation of May contracts in preparation for notices next Thursday was a trading feature. This selling was absorbed by price fixing and buying against sales of later deliveries at slightly narrowing differences between May and new crop positions.

Weather and crop advices received comparatively little attention, but there has been some comment on recent unfavorable conditions in parts of the Western belt. Reports continue to reach the market that growers generally are cooperating fully in the curtailment program and there has been a tendency in some quarters to scale down estimates of the prospective acreage, with figures now ranging around 30 to 31 million acres.

Tide Water Acquires Seven Producing Wells

New York, April 19.—Tide Water Oil Co., one of the largest operators in the Conroe Field, Montgomery County, Tex., has increased its holdings by acquiring through purchase from Alpha Petroleum Corporation, the latter company's Krone lease. The property is fully developed and consists of 120 acres with seven producing wells.

This acquisition is a further step in Tide Water's program of obtaining desirable producing properties for the purpose of insuring adequate crude reserves. The terms of the transaction were not announced.

Exchange to Consider Rules.

New York, April 18.—Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, has issued the following statement: "The rules for the regulation of trading on exchanges recommended by the Securities and Exchange Commission for adoption by national securities exchanges will be promptly placed before the governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange for consideration and action."

No Ruinous Commodity Rise In Sight, National Survey Finds

Advance Since January, 1934, Amounting to 11.5 Per Cent, Has Been in Farm Products and Foods; Other Commodities Off .5 Per Cent, Says Moody's.

New York, April 19.—Contrary to the belief of many business men, who have been influenced by the wave of inflation excitement which has recently spread over the country, no nearby ruinous price rise is in prospect and inflation fears on the part of investors are decidedly premature, Moody's Investors Service maintains in an analysis of "Inflation in the United States."

"The only disastrous possibilities for the investor, contained in an inflation, is a tremendous rise in commodity prices, which would decrease the purchasing power of his investment income and principal," says Moody's. "But commodity prices are affected by a number of things, principally supply, demand and money factors. At present, so many abnormal things are happening to gold, currency and other types of money or parts of the money mechanism that the very important supply and demand factors are almost forgotten."

Actually, the rise in prices which we have had since January, 1934, amounting to 11.5 per cent, has been almost entirely due to the rise in farm products and foods, as other than farm commodities have actually declined by 5 per cent. The rise in farm products and foods, in turn, was due to drought and AAA policies. Had the increased supply of money been the sole factor, all prices would have gone up.

Inflations Follow Wars.

The analysis points out that big price inflations have occurred almost exclusively during wars or periods immediately thereafter. Wars bring huge Government deficits, rapid creation of bank deposits; at the same time the Government becomes an insatiable buyer of war goods which are almost immediately consumed, the productive capacity of the country is turned to making war materials, and peace-time sources of supply abroad are badly restricted. Under these conditions commodity price inflations ensue fairly easily.

"The present resembles war conditions only in respect to piling up of a huge Governmental deficit each year, the translation of this deficit into money through bank deposits, the abandonment of the gold standard and depreciation of the currency in terms of foreign exchange.

Raw Materials Plentiful.

"But the analogy breaks down when demand and supply factors are considered. Far from having a shortage, we actually have a plentiful supply of raw materials, a productive capacity for both agricultural and manufactured goods far in excess of current consumption, an unheard of amount of unemployed and a condition which holds back the expenditure of savings for capital goods. The effect of these factors is to depress rather than stimulate prices.

"The foregong does not mean, of course, that a dangerous rise in commodity prices is wholly out of the question, but it is plain that there are many obstacles to advancing prices," continues Moody's. "The clearest road to ruinous price inflation lies in an indefinite continuation of the present situation in which we are getting nowhere. Without recovery and reemployment and with business being harassed and hamstrung with regulations, we could arrive at a growing distribution of money and an actual scarcity of goods and an inability to produce goods rapidly. This would amount to economic disintegration."

Cuban Sugar Store Drops 29.8 Per Cent Below Year's High

New York, April 19.—Stocks of raw Cuban sugar in licensed warehouses in the port of New York amount to 61,916 long tons today, a decline of 26,277 tons or 29.8 per cent from the high point of the year, 88,195 tons on January 8, according to the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange. The decrease in Philippine raw sugars has been even greater, stocks today amounting to 36,626 tons, compared with 93,796 tons at the high point on January 7, a decrease of 57,170 tons, or 61 per cent.

Cuban stocks this year are less than half those at the same date last year when 125,000 tons were in licensed stores. Philippine stock records were not kept last year because at that time Philippine sugar was not deliverable on exchange contracts, while this year under the new No. 3 contract delivery of Philippine sugar can be made with payment by the buyer of a premium equivalent to the duty on Cuban sugar existing at the date of delivery. At present, the Cuban duty is 90 cents per pound, based on 96 degrees polarization.

Prime Steers Sold At Five-Year High In Chicago Yard

Mitchell, Nebr., April 19 (AP)—Topping the cattle market at the world's largest stockyard—Chicago—has become a habit with Fred M. Attebery, veteran feeder of Nebraska grown, high grade Hereford steers.

Yesterday he got $15.50 a hundredweight for a carload of 19 prime white face steers, the highest paid since March, 1930.

It had been only a week since he previously topped the Chicago market and he still has about 250 head which will be sold at the rate of a carload a week. The sale yesterday brought Attebery about $222 a head or $4,200.

Last year he topped the Chicago market 15 times.

Wool Industry Is Operating At Top Speed

New York, April 19.—The wool manufacturing industry of this country is running at an extremely high rate, with a shortage of workers in numerous mill centers and with an average hourly wage rate on a par with that in 1929, according to a report issued by the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. Mill activity is particularly high in the men's wear section, with mills booked up for the next two months and soliciting orders for summer deliveries. Prices of goods are showing an advanced tendency.

"The men's wear section of the wool goods manufacturing industry is in the best position in years," says the exchange service. "The largest producer is operating at an average of 90 per cent of capacity and this rate of operation is exceeded by some of the smaller mills. Virtually all men's wear plants have sold up their output for May and June and are now soliciting orders for delivery in July and August.

Prices show an advancing tendency and it is possible that values will to go higher levels before the end of the current quarter. Employment in the wool manufacturing industry continues at a high rate in most mill centers. Some mills are unable to go into full production because of the scarcity of skilled help. Competent weavers, spinners and menders are difficult to secure. This factor alone is expected to check any tendency toward overproduction on the part of mills. Pay rolls are high. The average wage in the industry now is 50 cents an hour or on a par with 1929 rates.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

MR. TOM YAWKEY, who has expended $3,000,000 on his nouveau riche Red Sox, got ten runs for his money yesterday, but the chief difference in the Boston team that finished fourth last year and the club which Joe Cronin has been commanded to win the pennant with this season, appears to be Cronin himself.

MACK.

There was no manifestation yesterday that Lefty Grove is headed for a return to the form that made him the most feared pitcher in the big leagues for a half dozen years prior to 1934. Grove's famous sore arm may be no longer sore, but the soreness apparently sapped a deal of the speed that he used to own. Out there yesterday, the Nats committed more solid hits against Grove in six innings than he customarily allowed in a couple of weeks.

There was nothing tainted about any of those nine lusty socks the Nats made against Grove in those first four innings, except Bobby Burke's slow roller that stayed fair in the fourth inning. And they were made, too, by a team that numbered six left-handed hitters in its batting order, a type of batting that is not supposed to favor southpaw pitching.

Mixed up in those nine hits were a pair of tremendous triples by Ossie Bluege and Johnny Stone and a long-distance double by Cliff Bolton. The remnant of Grove's smoke ball was a sphere of magnificent distances as it whistled toward far parts of the outfield. If Cronin's pennant hopes are supposed to hinge on Grove's recovery of his 1933 form, they are off the hinges.

CRONIN'S personal contributions to the Red Sox, however, can not be gainsaid. That double and triple he socked yesterday were solid knocks, typical of Cronin at his best. At the end of last season, when he was merely playing out the string with the seventh-place Nats, Cronin appeared to be slowing up and, with the ease with which he takes on weight, there was no guarantee that he would bolster the Red Sox appreciably.

But as he greets the eye now, Cronin is down to weight, the same destroyer of base hits that he was in 1933. At his best, he is a vast improvement over Lyn Lary, Boston's 1934 shortstop. At anything less, he is not as good a defensive player. But his hitting proclivities bring to the Red Sox the hitting punch they lacked in the infield.

Other than the presence of Cronin, the Red Sox are not a vastly improved outfit. Cronin is gambling with rookies at first base and in center field and any hope that Grove may win 20 games must be deferred in the light of his performance yesterday.

With Werber at third base and Cronin at short, the left side of the Boston infield is distinctly Tiffany, but the right side must still be classed as strictly Woolworth. This is a late date for Second Baseman Max Bishop to attempt to recover the spring in his legs, and young Dahlgren at first base has yet to prove that he can hit big league pitching. On two bunts yesterday, he gave a fine rendition of the Volga boatman in action on the ball field.

In Short.

Washington pitchers opine that the balls are easier to pitch this year . . . with the umpires instructed to rub the sheen off them before the game starts . . . thus giving the pitcher a better grip . . . Ellsworth Dahlgren, Red Sox rookie first baseman, is one of the few players since Ty Cobb to swing four bats before taking his stance at the plate . . . Cliff Bolton flopped to the ground twice yesterday on two suspicious looking high balls flung by Lefty Grove . . . he was at the plate exactly nine minutes jockeying with Grove's pitches until he slammed a long double to center field . . . Joe Cronin knows how to play Cecil Travis . . . in the fourth inning, Cronin was almost within reaching distance of Bill Werber at third base when Travis slammed a terrific liner toward left field . . . Cronin got it with a diving catch by reason of his presence near the spot . . . Bucky Harris seems to have known whereof he was speaking at Biloxi when he called Jake Powell the best right-handed bunter in the league . . . Powell's bunt in the fourth inning was his second hit since the season opened . . . and his second safe bunt . . . there was no chance for a play either time. . . . Moe Berg, signed by the Red Sox as a free-agent the other day, confessed that he had done his spring training on Broadway . . . Bobby Burke proved the wisdom of running 'em out at all times when he beat Bill Werber's throw to first base in the fourth inning . . . add items anything can happen in baseball: Brooklyn and Cincinnati are tied for the National League lead this morning.

Baer to Knock Out Braddock Inside 3 Rounds, Says Gallico

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, April 19.—There seems to be small point in holding my opinion on the Baer-Braddock fight for a later date, or waiting to look at the two athletes in training. If I am wrong, I might as well be good and wrong and get off the fence and out on my beloved old limb, that limb where I spend most of my time, that limb where I am never lonely because sooner or later I am joined there by Commissioner Bill Brown, or Gen. Phelan, and sometimes both.

The only thing we need sometimes is a fourth for bridge. Now, in my arrogant opinion, the Braddock-Baer thing is one of the worst heavyweight championship matches ever made, even worse than the Tunney-Heeney thing which was bad enough, everybody knows. I am telling you that Baer will knock Braddock inside of three rounds, and the referee will have to look sharp on THAT one too, because Jimmy is a game little sucker and gets up, and if Baer hits him when HE is groggy and can't get his hands up, he may injure him fatally.

Braddock's one asset besides his gameness and unquestioned courage is a good straight right-hand punch. This punch has worked pretty well on light-heavyweights and heavyweights who come in around 180-185 pounds. But he has never really disturbed a good top-flight heavyweight with it. He fought Lasky 15 rounds, and hit him on the chin for 15 rounds, and not even the accumulated effect of steady right-hand pounding on the jaw could knock Lasky off his feet.

In his bout before the Lasky fight, Braddock won a decision over John Henry Lewis, the colored 175-pounder, but mainly on the strength of three rounds that were taken away from Lewis for low punching. Actually, on fighting, Lewis beat Braddock, even though Braddock dropped him in the early part of the fight and had him in trouble. But James has never shown that he can move, think, or hit fast enough to hurt a real heavyweigrt.

A lot of experts have told me that Braddock will win because Baer won't train, that Baer will tire, and Braddock's punching will get him. Braddock caught Lasky after Lasky had had a bout of flu, from which one never recovers inside of six or eight months. He also caught him, as is now fairly well established, with a bad hand, and still he couldn't knock him off his feet.

He gave him a good licking and outboxed him, because Lasky was even slower than Braddock. Baer isn't slow. He hits like lightning, and he is no mean boxer. If Braddock were fast and keen and on the Loughran type, you might figure him to stay away from Baer long enough to tire him. But Baer isn't going to have any trouble catching Jimmy. And when he does, he will break him in two with the left or the right hand, whichever is nearer.

Reds Blank Cubs, 4-0; Third Straight

Chicago Blanked Again; Johnson Effective.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 19.—The Cincinnati Reds turned in their third straight victory today, shutting out the Cubs, 4 to 0, in the opening game of the series.

Si Johnson handed the Chicagoans their second 8-hit whitewashing in as many days, while Jim Bottomley drove in two of the first three runs and scored the other. Catcher Gilly Campbell, a former Cub, added a ninth-inning homer.

Bill Lee and Charley Root gave the Reds seven hits and six walks. Although Manager Charlie Grimm benched both Chuck Klein and himself in an effort to bolster his team's punch, the Cubs got only one man to third base. Only three Chicagoans have got to third and only one past it in the last 23 innings.

The official attendance was 4,100 paid and 5,500 ladies' day guests.

Six-Run Rally Nets Boston Victory

Cronin Socks Triple and Double as 15,000 See Nats Lose Lead.

Grove Retires at End of Sixth but Gets Credit for Mound Win.

By Shirley Povich.

SON-IN-LAW JOE CRONIN led his Boston Red Sox to victory over Mr. Griffith's Nats yesterday as domestic squabbling broke out in the American League pennant race.

It was Ladies Day at Griffith Stadium, and the Washington pitchers caught the spirit of it all in the seventh inning when their pitching became very ladylike, with the result that a half-dozen of Cronin's Red Sox crossed the plate between the first and third outs of the inning.

The final score was 10 to 4 and the Nats toppled from their first-place perch into third as the idle Cleveland Indians moved into the lead without moving a muscle. Fifteen thousand fans, 10,000 of them women, saw the Nats lose their first game of the season.

The Nats met up with Lefty Grove in what was the southpaw's 1935 debut on the mound, and an inglorious debut it was, but he received credit for the victory despite himself.

Grove departed from the scene at the end of the sixth inning, leaving Bobby Burke in possession of a 4-3 advantage, but he inherited the victory while taking his shower downstairs.

Sox Stage Rally.

Upstairs, the Red Sox were piling into the pitching of Burke and Thomas in the seventh inning with a six-hit offensive that was aided by an error by Jake Powell in center field. Relief Pitcher Thomas was a relief only to the Red Sox.

The Sox went into that seventh inning trailing by 4-3 and came out of it leading by 9-4. Rick Ferrell started it all with a single to center and Joe Cronin finished it all with a triple to center that drove in the final runs.

Burke managed to get two out after Ferrell's single, but Pinch Hitter Miller drew a walk and Bishop slapped a single to right center that drove Ferrell home. It also drove Burke from the box, thereby preserving the record of the Washington pitchers, none of whom have lasted beyond seven innings since the start of the season.

Manager Bucky Harris rushed Al Thomas into the fray and the Red Sox immediately rushed five more runs over the plate. Werber singled, Reynolds singled and Cronin tripled to deep center in the uprising that followed.

Rube Walberg held Boston's lead safe by the simple expedient of allowing only one hit in the last three innings, while the Sox saluted Henry Coppola in his big league pitching debut by adding a superfluous run in the ninth after Walberg himself had led off with a double.

It was a swell ball game for six innings. The Red Sox were off to a 2-0 lead at the start when Bishop beat out a bunt. Reynolds sliced a triple to right field and scored when Bluege made a wild throw on the relay from the outfield.

Bluege Scores Burke.

As Burke turned back the enemy runless in the second and third innings, the Nats retrieved a run when Bluege bashed a long triple

Cardinals Held To 1 Hit, Bow To Bucs

Rookie Blanton's Bid for Fame Spoiled by Davis; Pirates Win, 3-0.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, April 19.—Rookie Darrel (Cy) Blanton subdued the St. Louis Cardinals with a masterful one-hit pitching achievement today and led the Pittsburgh Pirates to a brilliant 3-to-0 triumph over the world champions.

It was the second time Blanton had taken the mound in a big league game. His first appearance was against the Chicago Cubs in the closing game of the 1934 season after the Pirates acquired him from Albany of the International League. That game he lost.

Backing up Blanton's superb hurling, Pirate batsmen bunched five singles off Southpaw Bill Hallahan to score all their runs in the third inning. "Cookie" Lavagetto opened the attack with a hit, and Tommy Padden, Paul Waner, Babe Herman and Arky Vaughn did likewise.

Only Four Reach Base.

Blanton never was in danger. Only three men besides Davis reached base—two on errors and one on a walk. No Cardinal got so far as third base. Six Cardinals were fanned.

Baseball players say Blanton, who hails from the little town of Waurika, Okla., owns one of the best drop curves in the game and has a fine change of pace. Today, however, it was his speed ball which turned back the powerful Cardinal attack. He kept his "hook" in reserve and threw fast balls nearly all the time.

Blanton was the "strike-out king" of the International League last season. In one game he fanned 20 batters. He is 5 feet 8½ inches tall and weighs 160 pounds.

For the Cardinals today, Hallahan stayed on the slab during the third-inning attack, but retired for a pinch hitter in the sixth.

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 19.—Mrs. Penelope Anderson McBride, of Short Hills, N. J., today annexed the North and South women's tennis title and paired with Miss Florence Leboutillier, of Westbury, Long Island, to take the doubles crown.

Mrs. McBride defeated Jane Sharp, of Pasadena, Calif., the defending titleholder and seeded No. 6 in national ranking, 6—4, 6—4, to take the singles title. Mrs. McBride and Miss Leboutillier conquered Miss Sharp and Mrs. Margaret Anderson, of Richmond, Va., 3—6, 7—5, 6—2, in the doubles final.

Wilmer Allison, of San Antonio, Tex., and J. Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., defeated Ramsey Potts and Ed Fuller, University of North Carolina players, 6—2, 6—0, to enter the final round of the men's doubles against Marcel Rainville and Laird Watt, Canadian players. Rainville and Watt eliminated Hal Surface, of Kansas City, and Barney Welsh, of Washington, 7—5, 6—3.

Chisox Rookie Hurler Beats Tigers, 3-2

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, April 19.—Rookie John Whitehead and a scrappy assortment of White Sox registered a 3-to-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers today, sending the American League champions down to defeat in their first series of the season. The Sox took two of the three games played.

Today's contest, although overshadowed by Whitehead's six-hit pitching, underlined Charlie Gehringer, Detroit's second baseman, as a powerful one-man threat. Gehringer's homer in the first inning, with Cochrane on base as a result of a single, accounted for all of Detroit's runs.

Fred Marberry pitched for Detroit and was touched for eight hits. He walked Appling with the bases loaded in the first inning to force in the initial Chicago run.

Buddy Myer Suffers Stiff Neck; Weaver to Face Red Sox Today

THEIR 1934 injury jinx caught up with the Nats yesterday when Capt. Buddy Myer was removed from the line-up with an old-fashioned ailment known as stiff neck. Myer's return to action today is in doubt.

Ossie Bluege, regarded as baseball's best utility infielder, was at second base yesterday, starting one lightning double play nad otherwise distinguishing himself with a long triple that drove in the Nats' first run. He will continue at the post if Myer is absent today.

Monte Weaver, the Nats' No. 4 pitcher, will get his first starting assignment today in the second game of the series with the Red Sox. As a result of his indifferent exhibition game performances, Wevaer's status as a regular has been clouded and today he will be striving to reinstate himself in the esteem of Manager Bucky Harris.

'Britain First,' Perry Spurns Movie Gold

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, April 19.—Patriotism has ruled Frederick John Perry off the gold standard, and so the world's amateur tennis champion is sailing home to Great Britain tonight to play for king and country for one more season at least.

"Of course," he admitted frankly as he packed his trunks for the Berengaria, "they may say to me 'you've been mucking around a lot and we don't want you;' but until they do I'm going to remain an amateur.

"I'm entirely at the disposal of the British Lawn Tennis Association," he said again, as he has said it all the way across the country from Hollywood, where he finally tore himself away from motion picture and professional temptation after an exciting visit that included a "did and didn't" sparring match with Joe Benjamin, former prize fighter, and a long-distance cancellation of his engagement to Mary Lawson, London actress.

To Try Sales Talk.

"As to the engagement," he said, "that's off, but I'm going to give Miss Lawson a sales talk as soon as I get home. I know it's off, because it cost me a lot of money to hear her say 'No!' by transatlantic telephone, but I'd better not talk about that. It's a delicate subject, and if I say anything I'm sure to put my foot right in it again."

500,000 See Kelley Win Marathon

Dingis, of Baltimore, Is Second; Is Never Far Behind Rival.

By the United Press.

BOSTON, April 19.—An orchid to John Adelbert (Johnny) Kelley, Arlington's "flying florist," winner of today's thirty-ninth annual Boston A. A. marathon.

This lean, wiry 27-year-old "running laboratory" for Harvard University, last year's runner-up and a top-favorite today, led a flashy, international field of 196 distance plodders over the 26-mile 385-yard course between Hopkinton and Boston as some 500,000 looked on.

His time of 2 hours 32 minutes 7 3-5 seconds was only 1 minute 5 4-5 seconds slower than the course record. At two timing stations he was ahead of the record and might have lowered it but for nausea that seized him on the home stretch.

Pat Dengis Second.

Pat Dengis, Baltimore veteran and another favorite, was second in 2:34:11 1-5. He had dogged Kelley from the halfway mark, never more than 500 yards behind.

Seasoned marathoners predominated among the coveted "first ten" finishers with Dick Wilding, of Mount Dennis, Ont., third in 2:39:50; Gordon Norman, Beverly, fourth in 2:40:57 2-5; Hugo Kauppinen, New York, fifth in 2:44:33 2-5; Earle Collins Medford, sixth in 2:44:39 1-5; Joseph Plouffe Pawtucket, R. I., seventh in 2:44:57 1-5; Fred Ward, New York, eighth in 2:46:08 2-5; Vic Collard, Toronto Ont., ninth in 2:46:51 1-5; and Andre Brunelle, Beverly, tenth in 2:47:23 2-5.

Jimmy Henigan, Medford, 1931 winner who will be 43 next Friday, surprised by finishing eleventh in 2:48.43 4-5.

Clarence Harrison De Mar, New Hampshire schoolmaster and seven-time winner, who will be 47 in June, was eighteenth, 26 minutes behind the victor.

Paul De Bruyn, New York, 1932 winner, dropped out after 17 miles.

Kennedy Is Twenty-third.

William J. (Bricklayer Bill) Kennedy, gray-haired 1917 winner from East Port Chester, Conn., was twenty-third.

Among early finishers were: Twelfth, Cecil Hill, Beverly; thirteenth, Ellison (Tarzan) Brown, Narragansett Indian from Westerly, R. I.; fourteenth, Frederick Bristow, Mount Dennis, Ontario; fifteenth, Jim Shaw, Toronto; sixteenth, John M. Clarke, Philadelphia; seventeenth, George Rolland, Long Island, N. Y.; eighteenth, De Mar; nineteenth, Charles Bredersop, Pawtucket; twentieth, Walter K. Ray, Beverly; twenty-first, Karl Koski, New York.

10,000 Fans See Winner Pay $5

By Walter Haight.

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, Md., April 19.—Two veterans—"Sonny" Workman, Washington's gift to the saddle, and Ladfield, 6-year-old son of Ladkin—teamed to take feature honors here today in the grade B handicap, standout race on an interesting program. With Workman doing some of his best urging and the hefty Ladfield doing some of his best running, the result was not close.

Four lengths behind was Our Mae, a sprightly three-year-old miss whose best wasn't enough today. Another half length away was Silent Shot, making a futile stretch bid. Strung out along the stretch were Sun Monk, Billy Bee, and Miss Monoa.

Ladfield's victory had been anticipated, for the horse, after sharing favoritism with Our Mae during the early part of the betting, soon became a definite choice, and those who did the principal cheering went back to the pay-off windows to collect at the rate of $5 for each $2 wager.

By far the best crowd of the meeting, estimated at 10,000, saw the program. Philadelphia, where Good Friday is a legal holiday, supplied the majority of the customers. Spring finally came to the race track. Top coats were excess baggage up to the time the feature was run. The betting approached profitable figures for the first time since the horses came to the headwaters of Chesapeake Bay.

After a five-minute delay at the post while Sun Monk decided which way he would run today, Starter Milton rang the bell and the half dozen headed for the finish line over the 6-furlong course.

After the usual wild scramble, Our Mae was determined as the leader, followed by Ladfield and Miss Monona. Workman apparently was satisfied with Ladfield's position, for he made no attempt to catch the fast-flying filly until reaching the stretch straightaway. Just inside the curve, Ladfield began to move up and Our Mae began to move back. From the rear of the field came Silent Shot and Sun Monk.

At the eighth pole it was apparent that Ladfield had the race locked up, for the big horse plowed into the lead. Through the last sixteenth Workman gave his mount a stern hand ride while the customers watched the battle for second honors.

The closest finish of the meeting developed in the fifth race, when Four Spot and Ilchester were judged in order after a test over a mile and a sixteenth. From the half-mile post to the wire it was a two-horse race, with the star apprentices, Lindberg and Lynch, helping their mounts battle it out. Atmosphere was third. The betting was eligible for a "Strange As It Seems" cartoon. Four Spot, Ilchester and Saint Kitts were even favorites and any one of the three would have paid the $7.20 mutuel.

Deadeye Dick won the sixth race despite the fact that he went up on his hind legs as the barrier was sprung. This action helped his cause, for it bumped Goody Goody, the favorite, out of the contest. Flat Rock was second and Hidden Lore third. The winner paid $8.80.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPEED, $8.40, $4.90, $3.40; SANTAN, $15.60, $5.70; PICCOLO, $3.10.

SPEED began quickly, displayed nice speed while setting the pace, but had to be vigorously ridden during the closing furlong to withstand SANTAN. Latter raced in closest pursuit of the winner from the beginning and was gaining rapidly approaching the finish. PICCOLO showed greenness in the early racing, but closed gamely when reaching the home stretch. MR. QUICK bettered his position on the outside and closed gamely. PETER PEPPER weakened gradually in the final furlong. DEEP RUN lost ground for the entire mile. BEAU THOR was in trouble early. He was gaining steadily when securing racing room on the inside during the stretch run. KNIGHT WARRIOR went evenly. WAR TAIL could not menace.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward foaled in Maryland. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:06½. Winner, L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANCEL, $3.30, $2.70, $2.60; DANCING MACK, $6.50, $6.00; SMALL CHANGE, $31.50.

CANCEL gained command soon after the start, drew clear when reaching the home stretch, and held DANCING MACK safe when the real test came. DANCING MACK was kept within striking distance of the leaders, responded willingly and closed gamely on the outside during the final drive. SMALL CHANGE, a factor all the way, held on well after saving ground in the final issue. HARD CHASE, far out of contention for the first half-mile, weaved her way between horses in the last three-sixteenths and finished with a bold rush. MARYS MAY finished gamely. ADVOCATE JUNIOR lacked speed and could not engage the leaders. LANDSMAN weakened after reaching the home stretch. PEKIN and POOP DECK stopped.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:41½. Winner, J. E. Smallman's blk m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUICKLY, $7.10, $3.60, $3.10; NIGHT SPRITE, $4.00, $3.10; DOKAS, $4.00.

QUICKLY hurried into the lead after breaking forwardly, was steadied in front, while resisting strong opposition from NIGHT SPRITE, saved ground and had speed in reserve at the end. NIGHT SPRITE followed close up under urging in the early racing, made repeated efforts under punishment, but failed to challenge seriously. DOKAS bettered his position on the outside and was racing stoutly nearing the end. MANG FROID, prominent in the early racing, saved ground, but failed to menace when the real issue came. CHIRAC could not improve his position. FLUFFY LEE was overmatched.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:15. Winner, Mrs. C. Crane's dk. b. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADFIELD, $5.00, $2.60, $2.20; OUR MAE, $3.10, $2.40; SILENT SHOT, $3.60.

LADFIELD, going strongly and in close pursuit of OUR MAE, wore the pacemaker down midway of the home stretch and drew out rapidly nearing the finish. OUR MAE had good speed while setting the pace, saved ground, but could not stay with the winner when collared. SILENT SHOT was vigorously ridden in the last half mile and finished gamely. BILLY BEE was worked out a mile. SUN MONK, on inside during the first three furlongs, fell back at the turn, then was steered very wide during the stretch run. He closed strong. MISS MONOA was done after five furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:45. Off at 4:46. Winner, D. J. FOUR SPOT, in the thick of contention from the beginning, assumed a brief lead in the last three-sixteenths, continued strongly under a vigorous drive and just lasted long enough. ILCHESTER, steadied in front after gaining command going to the first turn, held on courageously after being displaced and fought it out willingly. ATMOSPHERE handled his weight well and held on gamely to outstay LUCULENT. The latter was racing stoutly in the final test. SAINT KITTS broke slowly and could not threaten after being placed to punishment. OLD JUDGE tired.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEADEYE DICK, $8.80, $4.40, $3.70; FLAT ROCK, $13.00, $6.80; HIDDEN LORE, $8.40.

DEADEYE DICK, caught in tight quarters when the break came, worked his way into a contending position between his field, responded strongly to punishment when reaching the home stretch and was up right at the end. FLAT ROCK, going in his best form, reached the leaders soon after HIDDEN LORE broke and held on stoutly. HIDDEN LORE took command when leaving the back stretch, saved ground, but failed to rally when nearing the finish. GOODY GOODY, crowded back going to the first turn, finished gamely when finding racing room. REPEAL could not menace in the early racing. GAY PARTY was held safe. INFILEE met with interference on the back stretch and was never a factor thereafter. DEAR ZIN and BUCK AND WING stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:50. Off at 5:52. Winner, Miss A. TOP HIGH saved much ground at the first turn to enter contention, was rated close to the leaders until leaving the back stretch, took command at his leisure and drew out at will during the final drive. ZEMBLA, as usual slow to get going, circled her field and closed stoutly. AIRWAY, prominent in the early running, tired in the final quarter-mile after going into a slight lead. FAIR MOLE closed a good gap. WAR TIDE raced forwardly and had no mishaps. GEORGE JESSEL was unable to enter contention. SIMPLE SINGER began tiring after six furlongs. POTION became distressed and was pulled up leaving the back stretch.

'Hunch' Betters Sigh for 'Double'

By a Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, April 19.—For the second straight day the "hunch" betters watched the races here and sighed because there was no daily double. Today, the big hunch on the first and third races, which are used for the "twin wager" at other tracks, was the horses Speed and Quickly. They were winners at mutuels of $8.40 and $7.10.

Yesterday, the "monetary double" of Gold Basis and Deflate was a winner and the "hunchers" are wondering if it will be Mountain Elk and Winter Sport or Meridian Queen and Wise Duke tomorrow.

Tests Fail to Show Nature of Dose in Poisoning at Bowie

By a Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, April 19.—George Brown, jr., the Maryland Racing Commission's steward on all tracks in this State, stated today that the chemical analysis had failed to reveal positively the nature of the drugs used to poison three horses at Bowie a week ago today. Private tests on one of the horses had shown traces of carbolic acid.

Brown also reported that no trace of the culprits who attempted to "fix" the race had been disclosed. Detectives are still working on the case and have trailed several suspects, he said. Sleuths are inclined to believe the affair was an "inside job." The trainer of Hows Chances, one of the victims, has discharged a number of his employes since the tampering.

Gold Step Triumphs In Arlington Feature

Arlington Downs, Tex., April 19 (AP).—G. E. Ewin's Gold Step, ridden by N. Merritt and carrying 108 pounds, won the featured fifth race, a $2,250 claiming affair, here today. The winner raced the Waggoner course in 1:10 2-5 on a slow track in a chilly, drizzling rain.

Little to Team With Mackenzie in Match at Indian Spring

Californian In 18-Hole Contest.

To Oppose Diffenbaugh, Peacock Tomorrow or Monday.

By Dave Herman.

LAWSON LITTLE, youthful British and American amateur golf champion, will team with Roland Mackenzie, Congressional pro, against George Diffenbaugh, pro, and Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, in an 18-hole exhibition match either tomorrow or Monday afternoon at Indian Spring course.

The 24-year-old California ace, who sails on April 26 for England to defend his British amateur crown, plans to leave White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where he has been training for the past week, early tomorrow.

Tom Belshe, president of the District Golf Association and golf chairman at Indian Spring, and Peacock, executive manager of the club, completed arrangements for the match yesterday. Both are close friends of Little's and played with him during his numerous tune-up rounds here last season.

May Clash Twice.

If Little plays at Indian Spring tomorrow, it is possible that he will stay over through Monday. If he does, the same foursome may get together at Congressional course.

Little has a warm spot in his heart for District courses, and is especially fond of Indian Spring and Congressional, where he has broken and equaled par during various rounds. His most remarkable scoring over a three-hole stretch came last spring about this time at Indian Spring. Here he teamed with Peacock to administer a sound thrashing to Al Houghton and Diffenbaugh, rattling off a birdie on the fourteenth, an eagle 3 on the fifteenth and a birdie on the sixteenth.

That the amateur champion is at the peak of his game is evidenced by a great 68 he scored yesterday in a practice round. Three under par, he holed out every putt.

To Go to Paterson.

Shortly after his exhibition here, Little will embark for Paterson, N. J., where he will spend a few days practicing. He leaves for England on the Aquitania.

Golfer's Chances For Ace 107,510-1

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—The golfer's chances of scoring a hole-in-one are exactly 1 in 107,510, E. C. Conlin, rubber company executive, figured out today.

"You have 1,229 more chances of becoming the father of twins," was Conlin's opinion. "Averaging 18 holes of golf per week-end from April 1 to November 30, you will make 630 tee shots, at which rate it will take you 170 years to make your ace.

"Of course, you may make it on your first drive and save a lot of trouble."

By the Associated Press.

Chumbris, who succeeded Loker in the box for Maryland, was credited with the victory. He held the Tech batters to three hits in as many innings. Loker allowed only four hits in six innings.

At the plate, Keller starred for the winners, collecting three hits in seven trips up, one of which was a home run.

A's Blast Malone To Top Yanks, 6-5

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—The Philadelphia Athletics ruined Pat Malone's debut as an American League pitcher today by belting two of his offerings into the bleachers and pulling out a 6-to-3 victory over the Yankees.

Wally Moses hit Malone's second pitch for a homer and Bob Johnson cracked another in the fifth after two walks and a hit by Moses had filled the bases. The Yanks twice threatened to tie the score against Alton Benton and Roy Mahaffey, but fell short.

Mrs. Jackson's Horses Win In Trials

Triumph in Three Events at Keswick Club's Annual Program.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 19.—Entries from Marietotz, the stable of Mrs. Cary Jackson, of Keswick, carried off the lion's share of honors at the annual hunter trials of the Keswick Hunt Club this afternoon at Tall Oaks, estate of Mrs. John M. Hopkins in the heart of the beautiful hunting country around Keswick.

The former Mary Shipman, of Cornish, N. H., scored first in the opening class, when her entry, Cantaloupe, piloted by Miss Betty Walker, of East Orange, N. J., won the trophy offered in the event for lightweight hunters.

The red ribbon went to Grey Sky, 4-year-old gelding owned and ridden by F. Bradley Peyton, of Charlottesville. Third was Arthur W. Talcott's Little Golden.

Rugby Victorious.

Second place was won by Keswick, 7-year-old gelding owned by Richard O. Hall, of Keswick. The yellow ribbon was pinned on Doron, a half-bred hunter owned by Miss F. J. Shearer, of Locustdale.

Four teams competed in the point-to-point race and the gold scarf pins, donated by Misses Caroline, Anne, Frances and Doris Rafferty, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Rafferty, went to Roger Rinehart, of Charlottesville, and Miss Jean Riley, daughter of Mrs. J. J. Riley. Rinehart rode Alonzo Rinehart's Sunny Girl, and the latter her mother's gelding, Somebody. Turner Brown and Miss Louise Bryden, riding James G. Greim's Dixie, and Arthur Talcott's Little Golden finished second, Richard Hall, jr., and Mrs. Arthur Talcott third.

Rugby Wins Again.

Mrs. Jackson's Rugby rang up his second victory of the afternoon when he won the open-to-all hunters class. Richard O. Hall's Kilwick was second, and Wilbur Osbourne's Tennis, third.

Two accidents marred the afternoon's sport. In the point-to-point race, Miss Jamie Terrills, secretary of the Kiswick Hunt Club, was thrown when her mount Chico, ran away, and she suffered scalp wounds. Bruce Banking on Avalon to Take Permanent Possession of Cup.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BALTIMORE, April 19.—Howard Bruce, Maryland sportsman and owner of the famous jumper, Billy Barton, who finished second in England's classic steeplechase at Aintree some years ago, will attempt to win the Grand National Point-to-Point tomorrow afternoon with Avalon, a former flat runner, and thereby take permanent possession of the gold challenge cup put into competition in 1925 by Dr. and Mrs. Walter Wickes.

Mr. Bruce won two legs on the cup, a duplicate of the English Ascot gold cup, through Billy Barton's two consecutive victories in 1926 and 1927. Avalon has been pointed especially for the Grand National, which will be run over the estate of William R. Whittingham, on the York road, two miles south of Hereford. The race in former years was run over the Brooklandwood estate of Mrs. Isaac E. Emerson. Benjamin Howell Griswold, 3d, will be up on Avalon.

Eighteen horses will start in the Grand National Point-to-Point, which has been set for 3 miles over natural country and over 16 jumps, including two water hazards.

Widmyer, Seven Others Lost, Terp Trackmen Face V. M. I.

ITS morale unbroken although badly bent by the loss of eight men, including Earl Widmyer, Southern Conference sprint champion, the University of Maryland's track squad last night left for Lexington, Va., where it will join the baseball team in a joint assault on the ramparts of V. M. I. this afternoon.

The death of Widmyer's father last week precluded any possibility of his competing this week, although he will resume training Monday. Joe Ryan, another sprinter, is still suffering from an injured leg; Frank Sonen, half-miler, and Selby Frank, miler, are on the shelf with illness; Bob Beall and Don Ashton, two-mile aces, Harley Drake, pole vaulter, and Elmer Oliver, hurdler, are all incapacitated by minor injuries.

Thus, the Terrapins, who had hoped to crush the Cadets by a convincing score will be satisfied, and perhaps lucky, to win by the scantiest of margins. Virginia Military does not have a squad of Olympic potentialities, but it can always be relied on for some warm competition.

Maryland's baseball forces, too, appear to be in for a tough afternoon if V. M. I.'s earlier games are a criterion of the Cadets' power. The Terrapins have played in and out ball on their five-day trip thus far, and a poor performance this afternoon will end disastrously.

Braves Defeated Twice by Dodgers

Clark and Babich Stars; Ruth Fanned Thrice.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 19.—The Brooklyn Dodgers trimmed the Braves in both morning and afternoon games of the Patron's Day bill by 4-to-2 score today and recorded more victories in one day than they did here all last season. They took only one decision on Braves Field in 1934.

Outfielder Danny Taylor and a pair of pitchers, Watson Clark and Johnny Babich, took the stellar roles in the double triumph. Taylor belted a home run with the bases full in the first inning to drive in all the Brooklyn runs in the afternoon contest.

Clark and Babich hurled steadily, allowing nine and eight hits, respectfully. Babich fanned Babe Ruth three times. Clark, pitching his first complete game in nearly a year, drove in the winning runs in the opener with a second-inning single.

Giants Rout Phils, 18-7; Camilli Star

Slams 2 Homers to Lead in 23-Hit Attack.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 19.—The Phillies hit four Giant pitchers with everything in sight to chalk up the biggest score of the new season as they trimmed the New York Giants, 18 to 7, today.

The Phils collected 23 hits, including Dolph Camilli's third and fourth homers in two days, and five blows by Lou Chiozza. Camilli batted in seven of the runs. Euel Moore was rapped freely and gave seven passes, but lasted until the ninth, when Orville Jorgens relieved him.

Twins Trounce Chester High Nine, 16-0.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., April 19.—Alexandria High School's baseball team combined 14 hits with eight alien errors to defeat Chester High School, 16 to 0, this afternoon at Baggett's Stadium. The victory was the Twins' fourth in as many starts.

Butch Woods, Eddie Hammersley and Jack Armstrong all saw service on the mound for the locals, and limited the visitors to four singles.

Spain started on the mound for Chester and was effective for four innings, during which time he allowed two hits. The Twins took advantage of three errors, however, to score two runs in the second frame, and one in the third. In the fifth, the Alexandria heavy artillery went to work and scored seven runs on seven safeties. During the inning Spain was relieved by Royster, but he was unable to stop the bombardment, and in turn he was replaced by Floyd. With the score already 12-0, Floyd gave up four more runs.

Jack Varney, Alexandria's second baseman, led at the plate with four safeties in five attempts. McMenamin and Fones each got two. Fones also did some fancy base running, with four stolen bases to his credit.

The Sox boosted their lead to 3-1 in the fourth, when Cronin led off with a burning double past Travis and scored on Solters' single, but the Nats overtook them in their own turn at bat.

Stone sounded the tocsin for the fourth-inning rally with a lusty triple to the deepest corner in right center, and with one out Kuhel scored him with a safe bunt out of Dahlgren's reach. After fouling a half dozen balls, Bolton smashed a long double to center to score Kuhel with the tying run.

Bobby Burke prolonged the rally with the help of Bill Werber, who fielded the pitcher's slow roller but neglected to tag Bolton, who was racing into third. Instead, he attempted to get Burke at first, but the throw was a fraction late. The Nats went into the lead, 4-3, when Jake Powell scored Bolton from third on a perfect bunt down the third base line.

After that the Nats were through for the day, offensively. They made only one hit in the last five innings. Defensively, they were detained by that 6-run uprising of the Sox in the seventh.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

FOURTEEN items are contained in the rent survey questionnaire of the District Department, American Federation of Government Employees, which is being circulated in all the departments and independent establishments, under direction of John P. Simpson, Interstate Commerce Commission.

BAKER.

Mr. Simpson's organization is functioning independently of two other rent surveys by groups seeking lower rents and additional housing facilities for Government employes.

Increases in rents from 10 to 50 per cent, and in some cases 100 per cent, are reported by the AFGE, which is swamped by hundreds of answers to its questionnaires.

The AFGE questionnaires are preceded by the observation that "Legislation designed to control the extravagant rent conditions existing in the District is now under consideration by Congress. The supporters of these measures need exact information concerning the present housing situation. You can help the cause of more adequate housing and more equitable rents by carefully answering the following questionnaire."

1. Name (may be omitted if desired). White or colored.

2. I (we) rent and occupy (a) a furnished room; (b) an apartment or flat; (c) an entire house.

3. Address.

4. These quarters contain —— rooms. (Do not count bath as a room, but count kitchen or kitchenette.)

5. The bath is (a) private; (b) semi-private.

6. The services checked below are included without additional charge: (a) heat, (b) light; (c) telephone; (d) refrigeration; (e) janitor service; (f) maid service.

7. The quarters described above are occupied by —— people, of whom —— are wage earners.

8. Of the combined income of these wage earners —— per cent goes for rent.

9. The rental per month for the quarters described above is ——.

10. I consider that a fair rental for these quarters would be ——.

11. (Answer the following if you lived in D. C. in same or equivalent quarters on January 1, 1934. The same or equivalent quarters rented January 1, 1934, for ——.

12. Are you accustomed to better living quarters than you have been able to obtain in Washington?

13. Do you need larger quarters?

14. Would you be interested in publicly financed low-cost housing?

Dan P. Mularky, RFC, secretary of the Florida State Society, reminds all Floridians in Government service to attend the annual dinner, reception and ball tonight at the Shoreham Hotel.

Staggered Hours Opposed.

Staggering of working hours of Federal employes has resulted in the peak of congested traffic moving forward a half an hour, with little relief effected by the experiment, it was declared last night by Edgar C. Graham, chairman of the legislative committee, District Federation of Federal Employes Unions.

Mr. Graham charged the Capital Transit Co. has not arranged transportation facilities to meet the change and apparently has taken off the extra cars formerly in use during the 4:30 rush hour. He also observed that the Government workers themselves have remained downtown the extra half-hour, causing a new hour of congested traffic in the shopping district.

Dr. Dean H. Rose, Dr. Charles Brooks, D. F. Fisher and Dr. C. O. Bratley, all specialists of Division of Fruit and Vegetable Crops and Diseases, Bureau of Plant Industry, have collaborated in writing a 70-page booklet on "Market Diseases of Apples, Pears and Quinces." The booklet is illustrated with 22 plates, 16 of them in color.

Naval Dance Tonight.

The Joint Retirement Committee of Naval Gun Factory is expecting a record attendance at the dance tonight at the Williard Hotel. This 21st anniversary affair is under direction of Harry H. Gillikin, chairman of program and reception; Robert H. Olcorn, and Harry T. Morningstar, (C).

Mrs. Beulah Ostendorph (F), has been transferred to the Washington office, Division of Game Management, Bureau of Biological Survey, as clerk, from the Portland, Me., office.

Lunch Line Leapers.

Sometimes when waiting long to dine,
To have these ill-bred persons chisel
Department cafeteria lines.

We'd like to bet that bottom dollar—
Yea, boy! we'd stake the whole darn purse,
Those chiselers would raise quite a holler

We'll wager there'd be some relation

Disabled Bird Lands In Lap of Audubons

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—As if guided by unerring instinct, a disabled woodcock, lost over New York's steel and concrete forests, today flew plump against a window of the offices occupied by the National Association of Audubon Societies.

Members of the bird societies' staff hurried out to pick the bird from the roof where it had fallen and found it had been stunned but suffered no ill-effects from its crash.

The woodcock's visit to New York in itself was unusual. But what amazed the staff even more was the fact that the bird headed straight for the spot in the great, strange town most hospitable to a bird in distress.

The EXTRA CAR that does most of the "running around" . . .

A "second car" is most essential and a matter of great convenience—actually a necessity in a big family. When the New Car goes down town the "second car" stays at home for a run to the golf course, or to do the shopping, or bring the children from school—the EXTRA CAR makes the quick trips.

YOUR "SECOND CAR" should be a "TMC BETTER CONDITIONED CAR."

They keep Papa Bungle alive! By jingo, how those boys have slip since they get high-tone idea and let their wives talk back to them.
Well, I fix that Sultan for this new-fangle business of being chicken-hearted. What a disgrace to his papa, known all over the Caribbees as Homicide Homer.
These up-to-date ideas have spoil all of us. Yes, even me.
I should have just knock Papa and Mama Bungle on head, grab this lovely Peggy by hand and say: Come on, we go to mainland and get married right now.
